Rep. Thomas Indicted on 4 Charges in Payroll Case

Jury Also Accuses Former Secretary; Legislator Denies He'll Quit Congress

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) yesterday was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury here on one charge of conspiracy to defraud the United States Government and three charges of filing false claims against the Government in connection with his congressional payroll.

Thomas, retiring chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, faces a possible maximum sentence of 32 years in prison, and/or $40,000 in fines, if convicted, according to the office of the United States District Attorney.

The grand jury also indicted Miss Helen Campbell of 1758 Lyman pl. ne., Thomas' former secretary, on a charge of joining with the 53-year-old New Jersey Republican in a conspiracy to "defraud the United States of its money and property" from January 1, 1940, to January 30, 1945.

Denies He'll Quit Congress

United States District Attorney George Morris Fay said he would ask the court to set Thomas' arraignment for a week from today.

Thomas said he had "no comment" on the indictments, but that there was "absolutely no truth" to reports that he planned to resign his seat in Congress to which he has just been reelected.

"That's so much poppycock," Thomas said. "You can put that down in the book. I'm going to stay right with this thing."

Thomas, who will step down as chairman of the House Un-American Activities group when the Democrats organize the Eighty-first Congress, and Miss Campbell were accused of conspiring to defraud the Government by placing the names of two persons on the congressional payroll who did no work for Congress.

Named in the indictment as the two fraudulently listed on Thomas' office payroll were Myra Midkiff (now Mrs. Rean D. Chilson, 1268 Raum dr. ne.), Miss Campbell's niece, and Arnette Minor, 1401 5th st, nw., a maid in Miss Campbell's household.

The indictment traced in detail the manner in which Government salaries allegedly were paid to the two. They were said to have been turned over first to Miss Campbell and then by her to Thomas.

Three Other Charges

It charged that neither Miss Midkiff nor Miss Minor was to keep any part of the salaries but instead "would turn over their monthly salary checks to the use and benefit of the defendant, J. Parnell Thomas."

Records of the House Disbursing Office showed Miss Midkiff was on the payroll at $1500 a year until January, 1945, and Miss Minor was on the payroll at $2100 a year until December, 1944.

The three charges of filing false claims against the Government returned against Thomas alone related to the filing of "false, fictitious and fraudulent" pay vouchers for Jacqueline B. Hill for services rendered as "clerk-typist to the Committee on Un-American Activities." The indictment

Early in January, 1942, the Chief of Staff had announced a determination to reorganize the War Department for the efficient waging of war. Foreseeing that the War Department as set up under peace-time laws could not stand the strain of a long and bitter conflict, he had a year before assigned Col. William K. Harrison to investigate its organizational weaknesses and search out a remedy for them.

Although the studies were completed by early winter and a corrective plan tentatively adopted, the attack on Pearl Harbor delayed its execution. The task of actual reorganization was now placed in the hands of Maj. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, possessed of an analytical mind and a certain ruthlessness in execution which was absolutely necessary to uproot entrenched bureaucracy and streamline and simplify procedures.

At the same time it was evident that somewhere on the War Department level there would have to be an agency which could assemble and concentrate the sum total of strategic information for General Marshall's attention and through which, after he had reached a decision, his commands could be implemented. This agency, in other words, would be the Chief of Staff's personal command post.

The creation of the Operations Division of the War Department General Staff was the answer to this need; it replaced the War Plans Division, where I had succeeded General Gerow as Assistant Chief of Staff on February 16. On March 9, I became the first chief of OPD. Almost simultaneously I was promoted to a temporary major generalcy.

As I remember it, I was far too busy then to take the time to thank General Marshall for advancement to the grade which, in our pre-war Army, represented the virtual apex of a professional military career.

General Marshall gave long and earnest attention to the selection of individuals to occupy key spots in overseas commands and in the reorganized department. In the process he sometimes gave clear indication of the types of men who in his opinion were unsuited for high position. Foremost among these was the one who seemed to be self-seeking in the matter of promotion.

Pressure from any source, in favor of any individual in the Army, was more likely than not to boomerang if the Chief of Staff became aware of its existence. I was in his office one day when some one called him on the telephone, apparently to urge the promotion of some friend in the Army. His answer was, "If the man is a friend of yours, the best service you can do him is to avoid mentioning his name to me."

Another thing that annoyed him was any effort to "pass the buck," especially to him. Often he remarked that he could get a thousand men to do detailed work but too many were useless in responsible posts because they left to him the necessity of making every decision.

By the same token he had nothing but scorn for any man who attempted "to do everything himself"—he believed that the man who worked himself to tatters on minor details had no ability to handle the more vital issues of war. Another type General Marshall disliked was the truculent personality—the man who confused firmness and strength with bad manners and deliberate discourtesy. He also avoided those with too great a love of the limelight.

Again, General Marshall could not stand the pessimist—the individual who was always painting difficulties in the darkest colors and was excessively fearful of the means at hand for overcoming them. He would never assign an officer to a responsible position unless he believed that the man was an enthusiastic supporter of the particular project and confident of the outcome. He believed in the offensive.

High Court To Review Non-Red Vow

Also Agrees to Pass On Eisler Contempt Conviction, Refuses Speed on Lawson

In three major actions bearing on communism, the Supreme Court yesterday:

1. Agreed to review a New York Federal Court decision upholding constitutionality of the Taft-Hartley Act requirement for union officers to file non-Communist affidavits;

2. Also agreed to review the contempt of Congress conviction of Gerhart Eisler, so-called "top Communist" in the United States;

3. Refused to take "speed-up" action and now review the contempt of Congress conviction of Hollywood Writer John Howard Lawson, whose appeal is still pending in the United States Court of Appeals here.

Appeals Split Decision

The American Communications Association (CIO) brought the Taft-Hartley Act's Communist affidavit issue to the high court in appealing a split decision of a special three-judge court upholding its constitutionality.

This case is expected to result in the first clear-cut decision on that much-attacked provision, and probably will affect the course of future labor legislation.

Charles T. Douds, New York regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, refused to place the CIO union on the ballot in a union certification election at Press Wireless, Inc., because union officials had not complied with the non-Communist affidavit.

Parallel in Some Respects

The Eisler case parallels the Lawson case in some respects, predominantly that both refused to answer questions of the House Committee on Un-American Activities about alleged Communist membership.

Eisler, who describes himself as an Austrian national and "a member of the German Communist movement," contended he came to the United States in June, 1941, "as a political refugee en route to Mexico under a transit visa."

Taken before the House committee on February 6, 1947, he sought to read a "three-minute" statement before he was sworn as a witness, was refused permission and held in contempt. He contends he did not refuse to be sworn, but first should have been permitted to read his statement.

Charges Prejudice

Eisler who questions the constitutionality of the committee, said that as an alien he could not be forced to testify and charges "bias and prejudice" in his subsequent trial before District Court, Justice Alexander Holtzoff.

He was given a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a $10,000 fine. The Court of Appeals here upheld the conviction, and Eisler is out on bond.

Lawson, former president of the Screen Writers Guild, is one of 10 Hollywood witnesses who refused to give a yes or no answer to questions of Communist Party membership. In May, 1948, he received a sentence similar to Eisler's.

The brief in his behalf states that, "When Government is empowered to inflict pain for political unorthodoxy, then the institutions do not deserve the name democracy . . ." He similarly contends that the House committee acted beyond legal authority.

While Lawson sought a prompt decision "to prevent further damage to those institutions," the Justice Department asked that the pending appeal be decided, starting this "is not a case warranting

Mrs. Roosevelt Suggests Party Oust Dixiecrats Permanently

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said today she would like to see "the permanent ousting of the Southern Dixiecrats from the Democratic Party."

She made her statement in the first of a series of American Broadcasting Co. programs entitled "Eleanor and Anna Roosevelt." The program features Mrs. Roosevelt and her daughter, Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, in a "combination of forum and commentary."

Mrs. Roosevelt spoke from Paris, where she is attending the United Nations sessions.

Regarding the States Rights Party, Mrs. Roosevelt said:

"They won four Southern States and 38 electoral votes, which might well have defeated Mr. Truman if the voting had been closer. Now, when to their utter amazement he has been reelected over their strenuous opposition, they are anxious to get back into the Democratic Party.

"The reason is that since the Democrats have won a majority in both the House and Senate, several of these Southerners are entitled to important committee chairmanships under the seniority system if they are considered as Democrats.

"Among those who will lose committee chairmanships if they are not considered Democrats are John Rankin of Mississippi, one of the worst reactionaries, and Senator Olin Johnston of South Carolina who snubbed President Truman, campaigned against him and then was one of the first on the train at Washington to congratulate the victorious President after his election.

"I think the people who voted for President Truman did so out of approval for his civil rights bill and other progressive measures and would not want to see him hampered by having important committee chairmanships in the hands of the fellows who most bitterly opposed the President."

Mrs. Roosevelt said she has felt "for a long time that there are really only two major political factions in the United States—liberals

East Coast Longshoremen Reject Wage Offer by 16 to 1

By The Associated Press

AFL longshoremen voted 16 to 1 against accepting the last wage offer of their employers in six East Coast ports, the National Labor Relations Board reported yesterday.

In New York, longshoremen met with Federal mediation officials in an effort to prevent a strike which legally could be called at midnight Tuesday.

Thomas R. Steutel, a Federal mediation commissioner, said he was optimistic that a settlement "may be reached" at a meeting of union and employer groups.

Joseph P. Ryan, international president of the longshoremen, said he was "ready to sit down all night until a settlement is reached one way or another."

A Taft-Hartley Act injunction, which expires Tuesday, staved off a walkout of approximately 25,000 members of the International Longshoremen's Association more than two and a half months ago. Under the emergency procedure of the act, the board must take a vote among the employes to determine whether they will accept whatever offer the employer has made before they are released from the court injunction.

The results of the election held in Portland, Me.; Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Hampton Roads, Va., will be certified to the Attorney General immediately.

After that, the Justice Department will ask the court to dissolve the injunction, under the procedure of the Taft-Hartley Act for dealing with national emergency strike threats.

A total of 16,646 votes was cast against the employer's last offer. That offer was to boost the regular wage rate 10 cents an hour and the overtime rate 15 cents.

The vote in favor of the offer was 1083. The total number of workers eligible to vote was 25,076.

Meantime, Federal Mediation Chief Cyrus Ching called for a quick end to the 68-day longshoremen's strike on the West Coast, now that the unions and management there have agreed to renew negotiations.

Ching sent his top aide, William N. Margolis, to San Francisco to help negotiate a new contract.

Allen S. Haywood, CIO organizational director, also left here expecting to arrive in San Francisco Wednesday to represent the CIO in the negotiations.

Both sides agreed Sunday to let the San Francisco Employers Association and the national CIO represent the disputing waterfront employers and CIO longshoremen's union in contract talks.

Up to now the waterfront employers have refused to deal with Bridges' union, claiming they had no guarantee any agreement would be observed to prevent work slowdowns and "quickie strikes."

G-Man's 'Blast' Tip Uncovers Mystery Here

Mystery surrounded the sudden calling away of a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent by the Navy as he was about to testify yesterday in a District Court case.

The first report was that the agent was needed immediately "to investigate an explosion at the Patuxent River Naval Base." Inquiry there brought the reply there had been no explosion at the base. Inquiries at other Navy and Army installations in the area where it was believed there might have been an explosion elicited the same answer.

Press relations men of Defense Secretary Forrestal's office said they made a check of all military services and found no trace of an explosion anywhere in the area.

The Washington Post was told, finally, in an authoritative quarter, that the FBI man was not called on an explosion, but on an urgent matter.

Truman Polls U. S. Bureaus On Law Needs

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday asked all Government agencies to let him know by November 29 what new laws they think are needed in their field.

In a letter circulated to all departments, bureaus and commissions, the President also asked officials to report on any subjects they wished to be included in the State of the Union message and the economic message to be delivered shortly after Congress opens.

He instructed department heads to file their reports through the Bureau of the budget, and said they should show the following content:

"1. The subject matter of all legislation which you desire to propose for consideration at the forthcoming session (of Congress).

"2. The state of readiness of legislative drafts and supporting material.

"3. Rerefence to the bills and House or Senate reports in the Eightieth Congress concerning the subjects covered in your program, together with a brief appraisal of the adequacy of these bills.

"4. Your views on the timing of introduction and congressional consideration.

"5. The names of other departments and agencies which, in your judgment, are interested in the same subjects."

D. C. Citizens' Vote Rights Argued in High Court

Solicitor General Declares Congress Has the Power to Bestow Privilege

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

Congress has power to extend the right to vote in national elections to District citizens, Solicitor General Philip B. Perlman contended before the Supreme Court yesterday.

And if Congress wishes, Perlman argued, it has such broad Constitutional power over the District that it could even make a State out of the area.

Perlman's declarations on these historically controversial issues were made as he claimed constitutional authority for District residents to have the same rights in Federal Courts outside the District as do citizens of the 48 States.

At issue was the 1940 Gwynne Act, held unconstitutional in lower courts. This act permits District citizens the right to choose whether to sue or be sued in Federal Courts, or in State courts. State residents have this right where the dispute involves residents of different States.

Old Maryland Rights

Perlman held that one source of these rights for the District was the fact that when the Constitution was drafted, the present District was part of Maryland. And when the District territory was ceded by Maryland, he said, District residents retained certain State rights.

One of these "rights," he insisted, was the access to Federal courts outside the District.

Justice Black then asked if these "inherited rights" would "apply to provisions that each State should have two Senators and so many Congressmen?"

"No sir, it wouldn't," replied Perlman, adding that it was evident that the specific constitutional designation involved did not include the District.

"Even you have to do some selection, don't you?" asked Justice Frankfurter with a smile. Justice Rutledge then asked Perlman if the "inherited rights" do "include the right to vote and the right to representation in the legislature."

Cites Congress Powers

These powers, said Perlman, have not been given to the District by Congress, but he added:

"Congress could give them (District citizens) the right to vote . . . Congress could make a State out of the District of Columbia. It has that right under the Constitution."

[Proposals for constitutional amendments to extend a presidential vote to the District and representation in Congress have been repeatedly, and unsuccessfully, offered in Congress. Senator Arthur Capper (R., Kans.) made such a proposal in the Eightieth Congress and in earlier Congresses.—Editor's note.]

In the case before the court, the National Mutual Insurance Co. of the District brought suit for a $10,000 breach of contract claim against the Tidewater Tranfer Co. of Virginia.

Suit was entered in the Federal District Court of Baltimore, and the Tidewater company was upheld in its contention that the Gwynne Act, permitting the District company to sue in the Federal Court in Baltimore, was unconstitutional. The United States Court of Appeals at Richmond upheld the District Court.

Justice Department Acts

The Justice Department, without taking sides in the actual contract claim, then entered the case to support constitutionality of the Gwynne Act.

That act, said the Justice Department, was the belated correction of a discrimination that has existed since 1805, when Chief Justice John Marshall ruled the Judiciary Act of 1789 did not give District residents the same rights in Federal Courts as citizens of States.

Perlman, and David G. Bress, who represented the District insurance firm, said Marshall erred when he decided that the District could not be construed as a State for purposes of Federal Court rights.

"There is nothing in the entire Constitution that prohibits the District of Columbia from being construed as a State" for that purpose, said Bress.

He and Perlman declared that when Marshall made his decision he noted that it discriminated against District residents, and

Bandit Slugs Store Manager, Gets $3500

Enters, Leaves Giant Office as Customers Shop

While customers shopped a few feet away, a bold holdup man yesterday sauntered off with an estimated $3500 from the office of the Giant Food Store at 10th and U sts. nw., after slugging the manager into unconsciousness.

The manager, Robert Garsh, 26, of 2809 S. 9th st., Arlington, was treated at Garfield Hospital for head wounds and shock. Garsh, son of prize fight manager Harry Garsh, told police the money, which was awaiting transfer to a bank, represented Saturday's and yesterday's receipts.

The holdup was not discovered until 10 minutes after it occurred, police said. An employe entered Garsh's small office near the front of the store, and found him unconscious on the floor.

Door Opened by Manager

According to Mrs. Lucy Brooks, 24, a bakery clerk who saw the holdup man enter and depart, but was unaware of the robbery, he was in the manager's office "no more than a minute." She added there was "no noise in the office."

Mrs. Brooks, of 606 15th st. nw., said the bandit walked from the front door of the store to the office—about 10 feet—waved "something green in his hand" over the 6-foot beaver board office partition, and Garsh opened the door. He entered, she said, came out soon after, and walked casually out of the store.

Garsh told police he often okayed checks of customers. He said the man had "what looked like a Government check in his hand." When

Grand Juries Probe Gaming In Maryland

Grand jury investigations into gambling were ordered in two Maryland counties yesterday and will be launched in a third Maryland area within a day or two

Circuit Judge Stedman Prescott told the newly impaneled Montgomery County grand jury in Rockville it must perform its duties and proceed against "gambling, vice and other crime."

Failure by professional gamblers in Baltimore to pay off $600 two high school boys won in a football pool led to a probe that will be laid before the grand jury there by midweek, the State's attorney announced, with indications football pool chances are being sold in all that city's high schools.

At Hagerstown, Circuit Judge Joseph Mish directed a grand jury probe into gambling and notified law enforcement officers if they neglect to seek evidence he will ask Federal or State assistance.

Efficient But Small

Montgomery County's new grand jury was urged to add the personal efforts of its members to the drive against gambling and other crime in the county in the charge by Judge Prescott yesterday in Circuit Court at Rockville.

The judge pointed out to the grand jurors that the county has an area of 517 square miles and a police force that while efficient, numbers less than the personnel in one police precinct in cities like Washington.

"Gambling and vice cannot exist without some members of the community having knowledge," the judge said in pointing out that the personnel of the grand jury is sclected from every "nook and cranny" and that if jurors properly

Martin Sees 2d Truman Honeymoon

Labor Law Repeal, Rights Program Passage Predicted

By Robert C. Albright

Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., (R., Mass.) yesterday predicted a second Truman honeymoon of at least six months' duration, during which the President can "get anything he really wants" from Congress.

He told reporters that went for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, and, so far as the House is concerned, for passage of the President's civil rights program as well.

Republicans, for their part, will cooperate on international measures and domestically "whenever he presents anything for the good of the country.

"Before two years are up, I think we will justify ourselves as the loyal opposition," he added.

Virginia County Board to Buy Land for Negro High School

Fredericksburg, Va., Nov. 8 (Spl.). King George County School Board today voted to buy a plot of land on which a Negro high school, authorized Saturday by referendum, will be built.

In the opening move to equalize Negro educational facilities in King George County, the board approved a motion to purchase 4½ acres adjoining the present King George Training School for Negroes.

The proposed school, approved in referendum by a vote of 322 to 245, is to be financed by a $150,000 bond issue. Plans call for it to contain four classrooms, library, combination auditorium-gymnasium, and laboratory.

Meanwhile, possibility of action by the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals was indicated yesterday in King George if the school board fails to restore by Wednesday five science courses dropped last week from the white King George High School.

Commonwealth's Attorney Horace T. Morrison said he will ask the court to restore the courses in the event the board fails to do so. The courses—biology, chemistry, physics, geometry and algebra—were dropped by the board to equalize white-Negro educational facilities.

In cutting them off, the board followed the advice of Judge Leon M. Brazile, of the Fifteenth Judicial District.

Morrison yesterday asserted Judge Brazile had overstepped his authority in compelling the school board to abolish courses which are necessary for some students to graduate and enter college.

He declared that sentiment was growing among the white patrons of King George High School in favor of restoring the courses and that they would not wait "longer than Wednesday" to have some definite action by the board.

R. E. Owens, chairman of the school board, said the board "has some plans for restoring some of the courses dropped." He added, however, that "until Judge Brazile recommends otherwise," the board's instructions to T. Benton Gayle, superintendent, would stand.

Morrison and Gayle both objected to dropping the courses.

The Federal District Court in Richmond still has before it a request for the school board to be cited for contempt in allegedly failing to equalize educational facilities.

A reply to this order, citing the school construction plan and denying the contempt charges, was filed by King George County last week.

8 Snorkel Subs 'Sink, Wreck' War Game Fleet of 100 Ships

Argentia, Newfoundland, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Eight Snorkel-equipped submarines theoretically have sunk or crippled an entire United States invasion fleet of 100 warships including the battleship Missouri, the Navy announced today.

Vice Admiral D. B. Duncan, commanding the Navy's greatest postwar maneuvers in the strategic North Atlantic, said the speedy Snorkel submarines, called "guppies," had far outclassed the Navy's wartime anti-submarine devices.

"Snorkel submarines in actual combat would have either sunk or seriously defeated our task forces before they could make an Argentia beachhead," Vice Admiral Duncan said.

Rear Admiral James Fife, commander of Atlantic fleet submarines who defended Argentia, pointed out that only eight guppies held the fleet back in yesterday's maneuvers in which more than 36,000 men, 500 airplanes and some 100 ships took part.

"Two hundred guppies could sweep the United States Merchant Marine from the seas," Fife said. He further pointed out that the Russians have nearly 200 of this type submarine, having captured the base where the Germans developed and built the Snorkel breathing tubes.

Units of the Second Marine Brigade, wearing special Arctic assault gear, hit the coast near here in the simulated amphibious attack which climaxed the maneuvers today.

Huge New Comet Discovered, Tail 40 Times Width of Moon

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 8 (U.P.). Discovery of a comet visible to the naked eye—bright as the stars in the Big Dipper and with the tail as long as the Big Dipper—was reported by Harvard Observatory today.

Word of the discovery was relayed to Dr. Harlow Shapley of the Harvard Observatory by Dr. John S. Paraskevopoulos, superintendent of the Boyden station of the college observatory at Bloemfontein, South Africa.

Observers at the South African station made the discovery just before sunrise yesterday. The second magnitude comet was located 5 degrees farther south than the sun and 10 degrees south of the bright star Spica (Alpha Virginis), in the constellation Virgo. Closeness to the sun, it was said, prevented its earlier discovery.

Dr. Paraskevopoulos described the comet's tail as 20 degrees in length, or 40 times the diameter of the moon.

(The Naval Observatory said "there is a chance" the comet will be visible in Washington at sunrise in the southeast direction.)

Seen in Argentina

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Nov. 8. (U.P.).—An unidentified comet, bright enough to be seen by the naked eye, was sighted east-southeast of here yesterday and today.

(An observer in Perth, capital of western Australia, also reported seeing a bright comet at 3:45 a. m. today, "about 20 degrees south of Venus.")

Marshall Regards Chiang's Commander In Defense of North as a 'Real Soldier'

When Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek named General Fu Tso-yi to command the defense of North China, he picked "a real soldier"—in the estimate of General George C. Marshall.

The 53-year-old jeep-driving general has been fighting warlords, Japs and Communists for 30 years, ever since he gained his officer's insignia at Paoting Military School.

GEN. FU TSO-YI
China's Hopes Staked on Him

The higher he has moved up the military ladder the less use General Fu has had for brass or braid. In the field, the burly moon-faced military leader shuns insignia of all kind, and dresses in the dirty-yellow-brown cotton-padded uniform and cloth shoes worn by his men, whom he calls "battle brothers." His officers follow suit.

Core of Fu's armies are his "Yellow River Bend Babies," tough, hardy sons of the rugged northwestern country—Shansi and Suiyuan. The "battle brothers" have a fierce personal loyalty to their chief.

They love to see their general up at dawn to drill with them, or lecture them in that distinctive Shansi burr of his. General Fu used to play basketball with his men—until he broke an arm in an accident. Although father of 10 children he still can ride the wiry Mongolian ponies with the best of his mounted troops. He encourages their gripes with a sort of "suggestion box" system.

General Fu is a stern disciplinarian. His troops obey—or else. His officers carry out orders—or else. But—it's said—he demands nothing of the troops that he himself is not prepared to give. Fu is a puritan in matters of drinking and smoking; a zealot in stamping out the opium habit and banditry.

The popularity of Fu extends to the Chinese populace. For years, as governor (and virtual warlord) of Suiyuan, Fu's motto was: "Bread is better than the songs of the birds." General Fu ran his province with an iron glove, but he was no tax gouger. He initiated rural reforms, sought to stimulate local industries such as blanket factories, and subsidized scholarships to America and Europe.

He now declares it's not enough to stop the Communists. He believes the populace must be won over, too.

Fu's Suiyuan Province lies in that nebulous area of China sometimes called "Inner Mongolia," and many of the province's people are Mongolian nomads. They hate the Chinese, and they hate General Fu most of all. The agricultural Chinese flocked to the frontier province and drove the Mongols deeper into the mountainous hinterlands. General Fu not only encouraged Chinese immigration, but he also ferociously suppressed all armed protests by the Mongols.

Born to wealth, Fu Tso-yi early chose the life of a soldier. He quickly came under the tutelage of his native Shansi war lord, Gen. Yen Hsi-hsan, a benevolent tyrant whose building of a railroad, steel mill and the like, won some fame for Shansi as the "model province."

When in 1927 Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek assumed control of the government and threw out the Communists, General Fu took his troops along with him onto the Nationalist side, and he's been fighting under Chiang ever since.

Fu displayed skill against both the warlords who rebelled against central government control and the Communist forces. In 1931 he was named governor and military commander of Suiyuan, and came out of the war with Japan with his forces intact.

With the resumption of Communist-Nationalist warfare, General Fu became "the people's hero" by lifting the Chinese Communist 45-day siege of Tatung. Then he went ahead to capture the Red headquarters at Kalgan.

In recent years, General Fu's command—and for practical purposes, autonomous rule — has spread over all or part of Suiyan, Shansi, Chahar, Jehol, and this past week, over all of north China.

Already, some are looking to Fu as a possible successor to the generalissimo. But, as the old China hands used to say: "Only tourists and damn fools try to predict what will happen in China."

8-Year War Facing China, Chiang Warns

Nanking, Nov. 8 (AP).—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek told his Chinese government followers today to prepare for eight more years of war against the Communists.

He declared the current peace negotiation rumors following government military losses were Communist propaganda.

Peace, the Chinese president said, can only be attained by destruction of the Reds throughout the nation.

Chiang spoke to 1000 top members of his Kuomintang (governing party) plus members of the Legislative and Control Yuans at the weekly memorial service at the tomb of Dr. Sun Yat-sen.

Chiang promised that remedies were being prepared for the disasters admittedly encountered in both the military and economic fields.

It was learned definite but closely guarded steps had been taken on both foreign and domestic policies at a secret meeting of the Central Political Council.

The president did not mention a government shakeup, but it was learned Premier Wong Wen-hao was firm in his insistence on resigning. He had shaken up the North China command by placing Gen. Fu Tso-yi in complete control.

Reds Claim Capture Of Shanhaikwan

Shanghai, Tuesday, Nov. 9 (U.P.).—Communist radio today claimed Red forces had captured Shanhaikwan, government stronghold where the great wall meets the sea. There was no confirmation from official sources.

If true, the victory would provide an opening wedge for the Reds to move down between Peiping and Tientsin, by-passing Gen Fu Tso-yi's forces now scattered along the railroad between the two cities further to the west.

Pauley Tells of Russian Ruin in Manchuria

Los Angeles, Nov. 8 (AP).—Russia took or ruined two billion dollars in Manchurian industry, and set its economy back a generation, says Edwin W. Pauley, United States Reparations Ambassador.

Pauley's views were contained in an interview published today in the Evening Herald and Express. Pauley is now in South Dakota on a pheasant-hunting trip.

The Los Angeles oil man, President Truman's emissary to the Orient last year, was quoted as saying that Russian removals from Germany appear moderate compared with Manchuria.

Pauley said he and his staff, whose observations still are in secret files in Washington, were barred from Dairen, Manchuria's finest seaport, and Antung, another important industrial area. He said they viewed Mukden, Chinchow, Harbin and a dozen other areas. The paper quoted him:

"The destruction that we saw was all but unbelievable. How much of it was the direct result of Soviet removals and how much to pillage, civil war and other indirect consequences of Soviet occupation, I cannot say."

China's Needs Topic of Lovett And Hoffman

By Ferdinand Kuhn, jr.
Post Reporter

The fast-changing military and political situation in China led to a private meeting yesterday between Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett and Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul Hoffman.

With them was Harlan Cleveland, director of the ECA's China Program Division, just back from a flying visit to the Far East.

In view of the Communist successes in north China, informed sources said it was far too early to decide the amount and nature of American help to be asked of Congress in the coming fiscal year.

No firm decision on this point, it was indicated, could possibly be made until about December 15, when the future of the Chiang Kai-shek government might be clearer.

One ECA official said the Lovett-Hoffman meeting was made necessary by the "gravity" of the Communist victories. Although new aid to China must await decisions by the new Congress, officials here have to decide how to use existing aid if, for example, Chiang Kai-shek should make peace with the Communists, or if the present central government should split into fragments.

So far China has received only 120 million dollars' worth of economic aid out of the 275 million appropriated for this purpose. In addition, the Chinese government has used up most of the 125 million appropriated for military supplies.

11 Draftees Report for Duty Today

Eleven more District men will be drafted into the Army today, bringing to 18 the number of registrants inducted here so far this month against the 55-man November quota.

After induction at the Army and Air Force recruiting station, 403 10th st. nw., the men will be given overnight passes and will report to the station Wednesday morning for transfer to Camp Pickett, Va., and Fort Dix, N. J.

District Selective Service headquarters listed the following men to be inducted today:

George H. Barnes, 25, 1863 Kalorama rd. nw., messenger; Werner K. John, 25, 2738 Ordway st. nw., statistician; Percy W. Fountain, 25, 1625 Church st. nw., receiving and shipping clerk; Merico P. Thomas, 25, 4620 15th st. nw., claims examiner.

Joseph Bullock, 25, 1021 Kenyon st. nw., cook; Joseph E. Wood, 25, 622 Quebec pl. nw., busboy; Charles L. Harper, 25, 3604 11th st. nw., stock clerk; James R. Brooke, 25, 1262 Hamlin st. ne., unemployed.

Robert E. Bell, 25, 2416 Newton st. ne., office clerk; Lewis G. Carson, 25, 936 Madison st. nw., stock clerk, and Robert L. Kelly, 25, 1508 5th st. nw., laborer.

U. S. Officers Doubt Korean Revolt Figures

Tokyo (Tuesday), Nov. 9 (AP).—Responsible U. S. Army officers here today expressed some skepticism over reports from Seoul of large-scale uprisings in Russian-occupied north Korea.

(South Korean Home Minister T. Y. Yoon yesterday reported rebellions in eight north Korean (Communist) cities had taken a toll of 6000 or more lives. He said the information came from sources whom he considered reliable. There has been no confirmation of the reports).

Army sources said there undoubtedly was some opposition north of the 38th parallel—dividing the Soviet and U. S. zones in Korea—to the Communist government recognized by Russia and satellite countries.

They expressed doubt, however, that such opposition in a "power state" such as the North Korean "People's Republic" could be as extensive and widespread as the Seoul reports indicated.

It is believed the Russians and the North Korean government have experienced some difficulty with the highly individualistic Koreans in installing a Communist regime. The flight of an estimated 1,000,000 people from north to south Korea testifies many do not accept the new northern rule.

Dr. Kung Considered For Special Envoy to U. S.

A Chinese Embassy spokesman said last night his government is considering Dr. H. H. Kung for Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's special representative to the United States.

The spokesman said he did not have full information, but understood the matter was under consideration in Nanking.

The embassy indicated the former Chinese Finance Minister would be asked to deal with emergency matters now confronting the Chinese government, both political and economic.

Dr. Kung is understood to be in Riverdale, N. Y.

Dutch Say 62 Died in Java Battle

Batavia, Java, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Sixty Indonesians and two Dutch soldiers were killed yesterday in a pitched battle 45 miles southeast of Batavia, Dutch army headquarters announced today.

The communique was issued in flat defiance of a United Nations Good Offices Commission request that both sides refrain from issuing military communiques which might poison the already tense atmosphere.

A Dutch spokesman said the clash occurred near Tjikampek in the same area where Indonesians allegedly had staged three attacks on the Batavia-Bandung Express.

Dutch headquarters charged also that Indonesian guerilla units had been ordered to infiltrate East Java again. The communique said documents captured in West Java showed that guerillas had been told to attack Dutch detachments, set up road blocks and follow a scorched earth policy in Dutch-occupied areas.

S. E. Businessmen Indorse A. W. Lee

The Southeast Businessmen's Association last night indorsed Adelbert W. Lee for another term on the District Board of Education.

Nearly 25 members, meeting at John F. Donohoe & Sons, 314 Pennsylvania ave. se., resolved to ask the District Zoning Board for a zoning map of the Southeast area so it can encourage remodeling and improvement.

The association also resolved to address a letter to Commissioner John Russell Young calling for a recheck on street cleaning and repairs on Pennsylvania ave., between Branch and Alabama aves. se.

Tojo Is Accused by Tribunal Of Plotting to Provoke War

Tokyo, Japan (Tuesday), Nov. 9 (U.P.).—The international war crimes tribunal said today that former Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo wrote death across the face of the Far East by provoking war in a grand plot with Italy and Germany to dominate the world.

The court's indictment of Tojo mounted as the tribunal president, Sir William Webb of Australia, read for the third day from a 350,000-word judgment which contains the verdicts on Tojo and 24 codefendants in the Far East war crimes trials.

Tojo saw his wife for what could be the last time yesterday. Along with the families of the other defendants, she visited Sugamo Prison and brought out his personal belongings.

The first official recognition there would be one or more dissenting opinions on the judgment came yesterday when the defense filed a motion asking the court to read those opinions.

U. N. Unit Scores Greece's Neighbors

He Expected It

Greek Deputy Beaten Up For U. N. Plea

Athens, Greece, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—A former cabinet minister who yesterday appealed for United Nations help in ending the civil war, was beaten up by other deputies in Parliament today.

The deputies set upon George Borazanis of the Liberal Party during a debate in the chamber. Shouting angrily, they ripped his clothes and dragged him into a corridor where gendarmes finally rescued him.

"I went to Parliament expecting some such a reaction with the conviction that even if I were killed it would benefit Greece by opening the eyes of the people," Borazanis said.

One of Nine Sending Cable

Borazanis was one of a committee of nine prominent Greeks who cabled support of an Australian proposal to Australian Foreign Minister Herbert V. Evatt, president of the United Nations General Assembly in Paris, declaring the majority of Greeks believed the civil war must be halted by conciliation.

Today's session opened with the first speaker, Populist Deputy Efstratios Kouloumvakis, criticizing Evatt for asking a stay of execution for 10 labor leaders who are under death sentences.

Kouloumvakis declared Evatt's plea was "unacceptable to Greece." He added that Borazanis and the eight others should be expelled from Parliament, arrested and tried for treason.

Say He Should Be Ousted

The other signers were the president of the Greek Bar Association, the head of the medical department at Athens University and six former members of cabinet.

Liberal Party Leader Sophocles Venizelos and Minister of Public Order Constantine Rentis supported Kouloumvakis and said Borazanis should be ousted from the party. The attack on the deputy followed.

The Borazanis cable was in answer to an appeal by Evatt, in the name of 58 U. N. member states, to King Paul and Premier Themistocles Sofoulis to delay the execution of 10 trade union leaders who were found guilty of soliciting funds from merchant seamen for Communist Rebel Gen. Markos Vafiades.

Evatt hopes to bring Greece, Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia together at a peace table to end Balkans dissension.

Sofoulis consented to delay the executions but angrily threatened to resign today, his fourth threat in 14 months. Later, he agreed to postpone his resignation until the U. N. Political Committee concludes its Balkans debate.

Paris, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Political Committee of the United Nations Assembly formally condemned Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia tonight for aiding Greek guerillas and violating the U.N. charter.

The condemnation was backed by 47 of the 58 committee members. It was the strongest action taken so far by any U.N. body against the three Soviet satellites. Russia and other members of the Soviet bloc refused to vote.

The committee's action was on one crucial paragraph of a resolution put up by the United States, France, Britain and China. The entire resolution still must be voted on Tuesday, but its passage was forecast by tonight's ballot.

Bitter words flew in the noisy committee meeting where the chairman, Premier Paul-Henri Spaak of Belgium, angrily accused the Soviet bloc of "systematically sabotaging" the Balkan debate.

Spaak lost his patience at the repeated moves of Yugoslav Delegate Ales Bebler, Polish Delegate Juliusz Katz-Suchy and other Slav representatives to fight the four-power resolution at every step.

Bebler and Katz-Suchy lost two attempts to get a vote of censure against the U.N. Special Committee on the Balkans (UNSCOB). They were voted down 49 to 6 and 50 to 6, with the Soviet bloc voting alone both times.

The main fight was on a paragraph which said the Assembly "considers that the continued aid given by Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia to the Greek guerilas endangers peace in the Balkans and is inconsistent with the purposes and principles of the Charter of the United Nations." This was adopted 47 to 0.

The Soviet bloc also fought another paragraph which proposed the Assembly call upon the Soviet satellites to "cease forthwith rendering any assistance" to the Greek guerillas. The committee approved this 40 to 0, with the Russian group again refusing to vote.

Black Market Fortune of GI Being Probed

Colorado Springs, Colo., Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Treasury Department experts from Chicago were expected tonight to examine an estimated $900,000 fortune in jewelry and antiques which an Air Force sergeant said he obtained on the European black market in exchange for American cigarettes.

Master Sergt. Wiley Clyde Walters, 40, and his wife, Miriam, 42, were jailed for investigation after police found their modest five-room house crammed with jewelry, paintings, furs and narcotics and guarded by six valuable French poodles.

Police investigated when a Colorado Springs jeweler reported the woman had left a valuable diamond ring with him to sell so she could "buy my husband a new car." The couple already owns a Hudson and an Italian Fiat.

Walters told police that while stationed for two years in Vienna he bought 1500 cartons of cigarettes from a New York firm at regular American prices and sold them at an average of $50 per carton. He said he converted the proceeds into furniture, furs and jewelry.

U. S. Officers Enter Europe Defense Talks

Herford, Germany, Nov. 8 (AP).—A group of senior American officers took a direct part today in talks aimed at planning for the defense of western Europe.

The officers, led by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, United States military governor in Germany, represented the Army, Navy and Air Force. They met with Viscount Montgomery, the British field marshal who is chairman of the military committee of the Western European Alliance. France and Belgium also were represented.

The meeting took place in a British army hut in Melle. Security guards ringed the hut and traffic near the area was rigidly controlled.

French Version Almost Ready

In Paris, a French Foreign Office spokesman said France's version of the projected seven-nation North Atlantic military pact is "almost complete" and soon will be submitted for governmental approval.

The Western European Alliance is composed of Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg. The projected North Atlantic pact would link those nations with the United States and Canada.

A British diplomatic source in Paris said the five European nations will meet in London Thursday to begin work on a common draft of the proposed North Atlantic treaty. The London phase of the study will be on a political and diplomatic level, he said.

To Meet in Washington

When the western European powers complete their version of the treaty they will meet with United States and Canadian negotiators in Washington, it was said.

Montgomery described today's meeting in Melle as "very successful, yes, very good indeed." He added: "We had the Americans taking part directly for the first time."

'We Are Stronger'

U. S. Allays German Fear Of Red Police

Berlin, Nov. 8 (NYHT).—District mayors of the western sectors of Berlin, concerned over reports that German police in the Soviet sector are being armed by the Russians, were assured today that American strength is substantial enough to repel any attempted coup in Berlin by German Communists.

Col. Frank L. Howley, commandant of the United States sector, told the mayors and other leaders any such attempt would be handily countered by American troops.

Howley's remarks did not refer to any attempt by Russian troops to take the city, a project to which the Red Army could clearly apply overwhelming force.

The U. S. commandant pointed out the arming of German police is clearly a breach of the Allied control agreement. Rifles and automatic rifles, the commandant indicated, have been issued to German police in the Russian sector.

[The United Press said the Russians forced Acting Lord Mayor Ferdinand Friedensburg to call off a press conference in city hall, in the Soviet sector today, because they object to the new chief of the Berlin labor office.

[Friedensburg said the Russians informed him they considered the conference "unfriendly to the Soviet Union." The mayor was called into the Soviet liaison office, in city hall, 10 minutes after the conference began. He returned to cancel it.

[Friedensburg said the Russians objected to the presence at the conference called to explain the city government's labor policy, of Paul Fleischmann, new head of the Berlin labor office. Fleischmann replaced Waldemar Schmidt, Communist, who was ousted for refusing to take orders.]

German Labor Sets Biggest Strike Friday

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Trade union leaders today set Friday for postwar Germany's biggest strike—a general walkout which may involve 4,500,000 workers in the Anglo-American zone.

The one-day strike, announced last Saturday, will protest the abandonment of price controls and rationing in Bizonia. Allied officials say the stoppage of industry, communications and transportation will cost seven million dollars in production losses.

The non-Communist labor leadership denies, however, that it is directed against the Marshall Plan. Union officials want immediate restoration of cost-of-living controls and declaration of a state of economic emergency in Bizonia.

British and American military government officials were expected to maintain their usual hands-off policy. Fritz Tarnon and Ludwig Rosenburg, co-chiefs of the bizonal unions, guaranteed that government offices would not be effected and essential services would continue for hospitals and other emergency stations.

Union leaders reported that 400,000 Germans in the French zone might join in sympathy.

Two hundred leaders of the Christian Democratic Party in Bonn went on record as against the walkout, but the Social Democratic Party supports the strike.

Gaullists Face Council Test Next Week

By Walter Kerr

Paris, Nov. 8 (NYHT.)—The first test of strength in the new Council of the Republic, for which indirect elections were held yesterday, will come a week from Tuesday when Parliament reconvenes and the council elects a president.

At that time it will be possible to tell exactly how much power Gen. Charles de Gaulle's Rally of the French People (RPF) has obtained in the new advisory house. It is something more than 40 per cent, but every source supplies different figures.

It also will be possible to tell whether, as seems likely, the center coalition parties now supporting the government can expect a slight majority, similar to their majority in Parliament's more powerful house, the National Assembly.

Yesterday 269 were elected to the council. The colonies will pick 34 others on Sunday. The remaining 17 members of the body of 320 will not be selected until later.

Of the 269 seats in yesterday's election, 267 have been heard from. The ministry of the interior gives De Gaulle 97, the French news agency gives him 107 and De Gaulle's headquarters claims 121. He had only 40 in the outgoing council.

All sources agree the Communists got 16 seats in the new council as opposed to 88 in the old, a loss which reflects the electoral law rather than the state of public opinion. All 16 were named in the nine departments where proportional representation was employed. In the other 79 departments the winner had to obtain a majority.

There is no doubt but that De Gaulle plans to use his council strength to disturb the government majority in the National Assembly in the hope he can force the Assembly's dissolution and new popular elections.

This is the legal road for his return to power as head of the French state. He made a good start yesterday.

50% of Miners at Work, Strike Enters 6th Week

Paris, Nov. 8.—More than half the nation's 335,000 coal miners were reported back at work today as the strike of pro-Communist miners went into its sixth week.

Strike developments today included a 24-hour stoppage ending at midnight by Air France air line crews and pilots.

Russian Warplane Wrecked In Greenland, Danes Report

Copenhagen, Denmark, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—The Conservative Party newspaper Berlingske Tidende reported today that a United States plane had sighted the wreck of a Russian military plane near Upernavik in northern Greenland last Wednesday.

"Air photos which arrived in London were said to establish evidence that it is a Russian plane," the newspaper reported. "The red star is standing out clearly on the partly destroyed plane. The fate of the Russian crew is not known, but no signs of life were observed at the scene of the disaster."

Danish authorities said they were investigating, but so far had no information.

An official pointed out that United States planes also are marked with stars and added that several wrecked United States planes were still in Greenland.

Reports several months ago that Russian planes had flown over Greenland were never confirmed, he said.

[In Washington, a State Department official said the department has no information, the Associated Press reported.]

Saed Again Becomes Premier of Iraq

Tehran, Iran, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—The Majlis (parliament) approved Mohammed Saed Maraghei as Premier today to succeed Abdul Hajir Hossein, whose government resigned last Saturday.

As wartime Premier, Saed refused to grant oil concessions to Russia. Hajir's resignation was reportedly prompted by the Majlis' failure to pass government legislation.

Chemist Sees All U. S. Uranium Used for Bombs in 30 Years

Chicago, Nov. 8 (AP).—A research scientist believes America's rate of atomic bomb production threatens to exhaust this country's entire uranium reserve in 30 years.

The rate of bomb production, he states in an address prepared for delivery Tuesday to a group session of the American Petroleum Institute, is "a reason for pessimism" in considering the future of atomic power for industrial use.

Eugene Ayers, chief chemist of the Gulf Research and Development Co., Pittsburgh, said the world supply of recoverable uranium "is believed to be about 10 times as great as that in the United States." Thorium, another fissionable element that might produce industrial power, is present in about similar quantity, he added.

Because the world's supply of fissionable materials is "definitely limited" he said, the kind of atomic energy now understood "cannot be regarded as the predominant energy source of the future."

Ayers said atomic energy "is unlikely to become important except for the limited uses demanding the highest energy potential."

He predicted that heat and light from the sun, captured and stored on the deserts, would be the "great source" of new energy in the future.

802 DPs Bound for U. S.

Hamburg, Germany, Nov. 8 (AP).—The U. S. Army transport General Bundy left Bremerhaven this afternoon with 802 displaced persons bound for the United States and Alaska. It was the second such group to sail under a United States law providing for admission of 205,000 refugees.

Arabs Spurn Plan

Baghdad, Iraq, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Arab countries have rejected an Iraqi proposal for a unified Arab military command in Palestine, Premier Nuzahim Amin Apalchachi said today.

As a result, he said, the high command of the Iraqi army would be free to take any decisions it sees fit. He declared that not even the cabinet has authority to intervene in affairs of the army high command.

Alpachachi sharply criticized the way the Arab countries have dealt with the Palestine situation. They would have been able to prevent the partition of Palestine, he said, if they had coordinated their tactics and adopted a firm policy.

"Instead of settling the Palestine problem by force," Alpachachi said, "the Arab states accepted a truce which could only benefit the Zionists and which the Zionists used to increase their armies and arms by immigration."

Legion's Choice As Bond Salesman

JOHN LEWIS SMITH, JR., of 2801 38th st. nw., appointed national chairman of the American Legion's campaign to promote sale of United States Savings Bonds. The drive will open Thursday, Armistice Day. Mr. Smith came out of the war a lieutenant colonel, and is a former assistant United States Attorney for the District of Columbia

U. N. to Debate Next Palestine Move Today

Paris, Nov. 8 (AP).—The United Nations Security Council will meet privately Tuesday to consider ordering the Jews and Arabs to enter into an armistice in Palestine, a reliable informant said tonight. Such an armistice would replace the Holy Land's present shaky truce.

The closed session was called at the request of Dr. Ralph Bunche, the acting Palestine mediator. The informant said Bunche will present to the council his concept of what the next step should be in the effort to settle the Palestine problem.

Bunche believes a definite end to fighting in the Holy Land is necessary before a political settlement can be reached, the source said. The acting mediator reportedly will propose that the council order both the Jews and the Arabs to work through the U. N. to:

1. Settle all outstanding problems of the present truce.
2. Look toward establishment of an armistice.

Two Sessions on Palestine

Involved in the second point is the wide separation of Israeli and Arab forces, setting up broad demilitarization zones and reduction of both sides' armed forces.

The closed session will be the first of two council sessions Tuesday on Palestine. At an open meeting later the Council will have before it a British plan to extend to all Palestine a Council order requiring Israeli forces to withdraw from southern desert positions they won in October.

One source said the United States was not likely to support the British plan.

The Palestine case caused a flurry of hurries inside and outside the U. N. headquarters today. These had to do with one question: What did Brig. Gen. William E. Riley, Bunche's chief of staff, tell representaives of Egypt, Lebanon and Syria in a three-hour meeting here last Saturday?

After the meeting an authoritative source said Riley "minced no words" in telling the Arabs their military position in Palestine was hopeless. The source said Riley made no direct statement but that his conclusion was plain to the Arabs.

Bunche issued a statement which said: "No conclusions of any kind were mentioned or intimated by either of us at this (Saturday) meeting." Riley said nothing other than to indorse Bunche's statement.

Marshall Called Riley

The United States and British delegations reacted quickly. A United States spokesman said Secretary of State Marshall summoned Riley for talks.

Harold Beeley, the British delegation's Middle East expert, called on Bunche for an official version of the talk.

Bunche's statement, delayed four hours today denied he or Riley told the Arabs the withdrawal order in the southern Negev desert was unworkable or that direct negotiation was the "only way" or reaching peace in Palestine. Bunche emphasized, however, he would welcome direct negotiations between the Jews and Arabs at any time.

Ahmed Mohammed Kashaba Pasha, Egyptian Foreign Minister, denied reports that Egypt and Israel already were negotiating.

Israeli Count on Quick Capture of Gaza, Arab 'Capital'

Tel Aviv, Israel, Nov. 8 (U.P.)—Israeli forces in the Negev expect momentarily to capture Gaza, "capital" of the Palestine Arab government and last Egyptian stronghold in the Holy Land, reliable private dispatches from the fighting zone said tonight.

The reports said the Egyptians were "retreating hastily" from Gaza.

The Israeli government, meanwhile, decided to promote its top army officers and began a purge in its police force following charges of widespread graft. More than 700 policemen have been questinoed so far, officials said.

Army Chief of Staff Brig. Yacov Dori will become Israel's first major general under the new promotion list, they said.

Israeli government sources claimed ot have "documentary evidence" proving the British have been and are continuing shipping arms to the Arabs.

Interim Aid Result Cited by Truman

The 577-million-dollar "interim" aid program that preceded the Marshall Plan kept France, Italy and Austria on the road to recovery and probably saved Italy from economic slavery as well, President Truman reported to Congress yesterday.

He said there was "no evidence of serious or intentional violations" of relief agreements with the three countries, and that the program was marred only by diversion of some gasoline to France's black market.

Economic cooperation officials who prepared the report said the amount of gasoline which reached the French black market was "very small."

Congress passed the interim aid program last fall as a stopgap measure to keep France, Italy and Austria from slipping back on the postwar road to recovery until action could be taken on the long-range Marshall European Recovery Plan.

The President's report covered the final three months of the program, which ended last June 30.

Here is his summary:

France — Enabled France to maintain production 15 per cent above 1938 levels; slowed the rate of price increases; permitted resistance to wage increases; enabled balancing of French treasury accounts for the first six months of 1948 without inflationary financing; and maintained the minimum level of investment for re-equipment of industry and agriculture.

Italy—Assured Italy a regular flow of supplies during "one of the most crucial periods in Italian history," helped her achieve monetary stabilization, and prepared the country for a program of economic recovery; shipment of 78 million dollars worth of grain "probably saved Italy from a form of economic bondage" that would have resulted if she had been forced to buy grain "from sources that would have impaired Italy's economic freedom."

Austria—Made a "major contribution" to Austria's diet during the 12 months ending June 30, 1948, and supported Austrian industries and transportation through shipment of 1,876,000 tons of coal.

Labor Leaders Are Johnson's Envoy Choice

Eric Johnston thinks that America needs a new type of ambassador to represent it abroad, and that labor leaders would fill the bill because they are closest to the people.

The head of the Motion Picture Producers Association of America made the suggestion in his new book, "We're All In It," published yesterday by Dutton.

The former president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said that "old-fashioned" diplomats picked from business or professional life, as they are now, should be replaced by those who are closer to the people.

"Imagine the stir in this country," he said, "if the morning papers announced that Philip Murray, president of the CIO, had been named our Ambassador to France. And David Dubinsky of the AFL Ladies Garment Workers Union as our Ambassador to Italy."

Johnston contended, however, that such a proposal is not so startling.

"The battleground for the new world of today is at the worker level," he asserted. "We are up against the task of adjusting our foreign policy to deal with a world seething with new ideas. The old-fashioned diplomat is out. He doesn't fit in this picture."

On the other hand, he said, when the United States adjusts its foreign policy to the new shape of the world as it is, it will "need among our emissaries men and women who know people best and are closest to them." Such, he added, are the leaders of labor.

Johnston said this country is the "huge powerhouse of the west" around which the "free world" must rally or go down before "the sole remaining aggressive force loose on the globe—Communist Russia."

Gandhi Slayer Faints in Dock

New Delhi India, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—Narayan Vinayak Godse collapsed today after he told a special court that no one had conspired with him in the assassination of Mohandas K. Gandhi last January 30.

The 35-year-old Hindu fainted in the dock as he read the 23d page of an 80-page statement in which he admitted killing Gandhi and said that he should be hung.

After he came to and had rested briefly, Godse continued the reading which began five days ago. The prosecution has completed the presentation of its evidence against Godse and eight others accused of conspiring with him and of possessing arms unlawfully.

Godse praised Gandhi's sufferings for the sake of India, but, he added, "Gandhi was not honest enough to acknowledge defeat and the failure of the principles of non-violence. . . . (He) had no right to vivisect the country . . . by deceiving the people.

"May the country properly know that Hindustan may be again united, and may the people be taught to discard the defeatist mentality leading them to submit to aggressors. This is my last wish and I pray to the Almighty. . . ."

Man Given Six Months In Hotel Assault Case

Percy Lassiter, 22, was sentenced yesterday to serve six months in jail after he was found guilty in Municipal Court of assaulting a 50-year-old woman in Meridian Hill Hotel.

Lassiter, who resides at 1748 Swann st. nw., was also held for the grand jury on a housebreaking charge. According to police he broke into the all-women hotel early Saturday and was surprised in the corridor by Miss Bertha E. Fletchall, a Government statistician. He struck her several times when she cried out, it was said, and was arrested three blocks from the scene.

Steel Production To Break Record

New York, Nov. 8 (AP). — The highest tonnage of steel in history—1,791,700 net tons—is slated to come from the Nation's steel mills this week.

This total exceeds by 400 tons the record wartime output, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported today. That previous peak production was 1,791,300 tons in the week ended April 24, 1944.

Operations of the industry this week were scheduled at 99.4 per cent of rated capacity, the institute said, compared with 98.9 per cent last week when estimated output was 1,782,600 tons of ingots and castings.

A month ago the industry operated at 98.5 per cent to produce 1,775,400 tons. The figures a year ago were 96.9 per cent and 1,695,700 tons.

Republic Steel Given New Lease on Plant

The Republic Steel Corp., Cleveland, has been given a 10-year lease on the war-built Government blast furnace and coke oven at Gadsden, Ala., the War Assets Administration announced yesterday.

Republic operated the plant for the Government during the war and had leased it most of the time since.

War Administrator Jess Larson said Republic President C. M. White had romised "to continue the supply of pigiron to the foundry industry in the South," at least to the extent of the Gadsden blast furnace capacity, "so long as economic factors permit."

The company is given an option to buy the plant on the basis of a $8,499,000 lease value for the blast furnace and $3,271,000 for the coke oven. The cost to the Government of building the entire plant was $12,113,000.

In return for use of the plant, Republic agreed to pay "rent" of $1.55 on each net ton of iron produced and 94 cents on each ton of coke.

Proposal to Raise Town House Rents Being Considered

The Rent Control Administration yesterday took under advisement a proposal to raise rents at the Town House by 13 per cent.

The apartment house, with 93 units, is located at 601 19th st. nw., and is owned by L. E. Breuninger & Co. Edwin Shelton appeared for the plaintiff, and suggested rent increases from $45 to $51.75 on 1½-room-and-bath apartments. Examiner William A. Mansfield conducted the hearing.

At the same time the Rent Control Administration announced it has received 118 petitions from the Waggaman Brawner Realty Corp. for rent increases on the Devonshire Court Apartments, at 4105 and 4115 Wisconsin ave. Requested is an increase from $40 to $44 on two-room-and-bath units, and from $81 to $89.10 on four-room-and-bath units. No date has been set for a hearing on the proposal, officials said.

Supreme Court Must Clarify D. C. Law on Weapons

The Supreme Court will have to interpret a District law prohibiting carrying of deadly weapons without a license, the United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday.

The Appeals Court certified the matter to the high court in the case of Samuel F. Waters, 44, of 54 M st. nw., who was carged with weapon-carrying.

The question is whether the Government must allege and prove that the suspect lacked a license or whether it is up to the defendant to prove he had one.

Waters was found innocent by jury of shooting William Sherman, of 210 2d st. sw.

Big Business, Industry Tranquil Over Truman In First Major Convention Since Election

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—Disappointed but not downhearted appeared to be the sentiment today at the first major postelection gathering of business and industrial leaders in the thirty-fifth National Foreign Trade Convention.

Many executives wrote off as campaign talk preelection predictions in some quarters of dire consequences in the event of a Democratic victory.

They took the view that business had got along under a Democratic Administration for 16 years, and would be able to manage for four more. While most of them said they would have preferred a Republican administration, they made it clear they didn't expect business to go to pot with President Truman at the helm again, and a Democratic Congress behind him.

Some, with large export businesses, were rather happy about the outcome, because they felt a Democratic administration would be more apt to back an aggressive foreign trade policy.

Carl M. Wynne, president of Overseas Industries, Inc., Chicago, said: "Foreign tradewise, I think we are more sure of a constructive and forward thinking policy under the administration than if there had been a change."

Wynne, whose firm deals in automotive parts and electrical supplies, said he felt that under the Truman Administration there would be "a continued expansion of the reciprocal trade treaty program that we might not have had.

"I think we have every reason to be hopeful," he added.

Curtis E. Calder, chairman of the board, Electric Bond & Share Co., New York, said the people had spoken in an election, that it was a fair election, and now people in all walks of life should work together under the Administration that was chosen.

"If we do that," he said, "I think the country is coming along all right just as it always has."

L. C. Boos, New York, president of the export company of the United States Rubber Co., commented: "Mr. Truman has been elected and industry will back him. All we ask is that he give us a break, and we'll go all the way with him."

There seemed to be a definite feeling that the sharp postelection slump on the stock market didn't represent the consensus of business—that business and industry by no means took such a dim view of the results as did the market.

The slump in prices was attributed in part to "quick money" buying in the expectation of a boom in the market on a Dewey victory, and then an unloading of shares when Dewey lost.

John J. McCloy, president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, told the convention our enormous export surplus "plainly cannot long continue" on its present basis of grants and loans from the United States. American manufacturers can continue to sell these huge amounts abroad "only if the United States follows policies designed to encourage a great increase in American imports," the World Bank head said.

"A further reduction of tariffs would be of substantial value," he said. "But at least equally important is the attitude of the American commercial community and consuming public."

Allan Sproul, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, told the afternoon session that the threat of inflation would be licked by now, except for "the cost of waging a cold war and the possibility of a hot war."

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer said that this possibility meant the country must keep a large carryover of wheat on hand. He preceded his prepared speech with the warning that in the matter of arms and civilian readiness "we must prepare, if necessary, for the worst."

Sproul, Sawyer and the other speakers agreed that the world's economic life would continue out of balance for some years after 1952, the date set for the end of the Marshall Plan.

"Some years beyond 1952 the world as a whole will continue to have a substantial deficit on current account with the United States," Sproul stated.

He said the Nation must go in for "further monetary reconstruction." The American dollar must be maintained as a fixed point of reference for all currencies, he declared. In time it must play the role of "an international or key currency," he added.

But he also urged "restoration of the British pound sterling to a similar position." If this dual role of the dollar and pound was to work, Sproul said other nations must exercise "necessary internal and external disciplines."

Sproul laid the present inflated monetary situation to "the crazy economies of war, and to short and long run developments in production, trade, prices, profits, fiscal policy, labor mobility and wages, and capital formation."

Prices "would be likely to taper off somewhat" from now on, Sproul said, "were it not for the demands of preparedness for war and even the possibility of actual war."

He defended the Federal Reserve Bank's policy of supporting the Government bond market and low interest rates for Treasury securities. He named as a "sometime critic of our policies," Thomas I. Parkinson, president of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States.

At the morning session, Parkinson said the Nation's money policies were the underlying reason for continuing inflation.

GEORGE E. DONALDSON,

Plunge Death Verdict Waits

Police and the coroner's office yesterday continued their investigation of the death of George E. Donaldson, 29, a Washington correspondent from Syracuse, N. Y., who plunged from his twelfth floor office in the National Press Building to an alley Sunday morning.

Deputy Coroner Richard M. Rosenberg said he had issued a temporary certificate to permit burial of the body but that he is withholding a final decision about the death until police can complete their investigation.

A former reporter for the Syracuse Herald Journal, Donaldson had worked for the James J. Butler News Agency for the last 18 months. He covered assignments for the newspapers in Syracuse and that area.

He had last been seen in the National Press Building when he left there around 11 a. m. Saturday. He was not scheduled to work on Sunday, police said.

There were no notes found, either in his office or in his room at 5904 Connecticut ave. nw. His landlady said he had been home Saturday night but had left there Sunday morning.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary Donaldson; a sister, Mrs. Walter J. Jackson, and a brother, James R. Donaldson, all of Syracuse.

Thomas' Is 11th Congress Indictment

By Howard L. Dutkin
Post Reporter

The indictment of J. Parnell Thomas is the eleventh instance since 1906 of indictment of members of Congress on Federal charges.

Of this total, four were cleared through acquittal, nolle prosse or reversal by a higher court. The rest were convicted, with varying sentences.

Senator Joseph Ralph Burton (R., Mo.), was indicted in 1906 on charges of having accepted $2500 from a St. Louis grain and securities company to use his influence in having a mail embargo removed. The company's mailing privileges had been revoked because of alleged fraud.

Burton was convicted, sentenced to 9 months imprisonment and fined $2500. The Supreme Court rejected an appeal challenging the validity of the indictment.

A quarter of a century later, Representative Harry E. Rowbottom (R., Ind.), was convicted of taking a total of $1550 from three men on a promise of securing postmasterships for them in his First District. Rowbottom was paroled after serving 9 months of a year-and-a-day sentence.

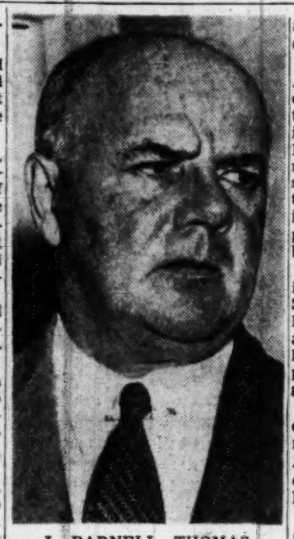
At the time his attorney pleaded that the Congressman was "a physical weakling not of the usual mental caliber of Congressmen."

An attempt to profit through appointment of a candidate to West Point brought a 4-month-1-year and $1000 fine to Representative John H. Hoeppel (D., Calif.), in 1935.

Hoeppel and his son, Charles, were convicted of conspiring to sell the appointment to James W. Ives of Baltimore, former Olympic athlete, for $1000.

In the same year, Representative George Foulkes, sr. (D., Mich.), was convicted of conspiracy to assess postmasters for political contributions. He was sentenced to serve 18 months and fined $1000.

Representative James M. Curley (D., Mass.) was indicted September 16, 1943, had the indictment quashed on technical grounds, and was reindicted the following year for using the mails to defraud. He was sentenced to serve 6-18 months and fined $1000. A rehearing was denied by the Supreme Court.



J. PARNELL THOMAS
Has Nothing to Say Now

On July 3, 1947, Representative Andrew Jackson May (D., Ky.) was convicted of conspiring to defraud the Government in a case involving the letting of war contracts. May and two codefendants, Murray Garsson and Henry M. Garsson, were sentenced to 8 months to 2 years. The case is pending in the United States Court of Appeals. Arguments have been heard but no opinion has been given.

Those who were cleared following indictment included former Senator Burton K. Wheeler (D., Mont.), who was accused of having accepted money in return for using his influence to get oil and gas prospecting permits for a geologist.

Wheeler vigorously denied the charge and attributed the indictment, in part, to a feud he had with Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty stemming from the Teapot Dome scandal.

The Senator received wide support and, in 1924, the indictment was dismissed.

In 1931 the Supreme Court reversed the conviction of Truman H. Newberry, former Republican Senator-elect from Michigan, who had been accused of violating the Corrupt Practices Act. The Government charged Newberry had spent $100,000 in excess of the limit allowed in connection with the State primary election in 1918. The high court upset the conviction on the grounds that the Corrupt Practices Act did not apply to primaries.

The indictment of Representative Frederick Zihlman (R., Md.), on charges of using the mails to defraud was nolle prossed for lack of evidence on November 18, 1932.

On May 6, 1940, Representative B. Frank Welchel (D., Ga.) was acquitted of charges he took money to obtain certain appointive offices for constituents.

Rep. Thomas Is Indicted

charged Thomas "then and there well knew" the claims were false in that Miss Hill "had rendered and would render no services" to the committee.

The statutes provide a 10-year sentence and/or $10,000 fine on each charge for this offense.

On the conspiracy charge, the maximum penalty is two years and/or $10,000.

The first count under the false claims statute charges Thomas filed a claim on the Government in the sum of $293.59 to be paid to Miss Hill for salary from December 1 to December 31, 1947.

The second count under this statute charges he caused the same sum to be approved for the period beginning January 1, 1948 and ending January 31, 1948.

The third count charges he caused the same salary to be fraudulently paid to Miss Hill for the month of February, 1948.

In connection with the conspiracy charge against Thomas and Miss Campbell, the indictment said:

"It was the plan and purpose of said conspiracy that the defendants would make it appear that Myrna Midkiff and Arnette Minor were bona fide employes in the office of the defendant J. Parnell Thomas in his capacity as a member of the Congress of the United States and that the defendants would cause the names of said Myra Midkiff and Arnette Minor to be placed on the payroll of the House of Representatives as employes in the office of defendant J. Parnell Thomas, so that the salaries of said Myra Midkiff and Arnette Minor would be paid from the funds and monies of the United States, the said defendants well knowing that during the entire period of said conspiracy said Myra Midkiff and Arnette Minor would not be bona fide employes in that they would not perform any work or services as employes in the office of the defendant J. Parnell Thomas in his capacity as a member of the Congress of the United States so as to entitle them to receive any salaries from the funds and monies of the United States.

"It was a further part of said conspiracy that said Myra Midkiff and Arnette Minor would not retain any part of their said salaries for their own use and benefit, but on the contrary would turn over their monthly salary check to the use and benefit of the defendant, J. Parnell Thomas.

"It was a further part of said conspiracy that after the defendants had made it appear that said Myra Midkiff and Arnette Minor were bona fide employes in the office of the defendant, J. Parnell Thomas, in his capacity as a member of Congress of the United States, the defendants would induce and cause said Myra Midkiff and Arnette Minor to indorse their names on each and every monthly salary check received by them for their purported services as employes aforesaid and would induce and cause said Myra Midkiff and Arnette Minor to turn over said monthly salary checks, so indorsed, to the defendant, Helen Campbell.

"It was further part of said conspiracy that the defendant Helen Campbell would thereafter indorse her name on each and every monthly salary check aforesaid and deposit them or cause them to b deposited in her personal checking account in the City Bank, 9th and E. Capitol Branch, Washington, D. C.

"It was further part of said conspiracy that the defendant Helen Campbell would thereafter draw her personal checks, payable to the defendant, J. Parnell Thomas, in amounts approximate to the amounts of the monthly salary checks issued to said Myra Midkiff and Arnette Minor as aforesaid."

The indictment further charged that in order to conceal the fraudulent employment of Miss Midkiff, the defendants would prepare her income taxes. It charged that Thomas paid the tax due on salary listed for Miss Midkiff.

Miss Midkiff was alleged to have turned back checks totaling $518.80 to the defendants from October 31, 1940, to May 31, 1944.

Specifically listed in the indictment were two checks made out to Miss Minor covering the months of August and December, 1944, and totaling $298.80.

Before becoming Thomas' secretary, Miss Campbell had been a congressional secretary for more than 20 years. She worked for Thomas' predecessor, the late Representative Randolph Perkins of New Jersey.

Patton Took 'Guinea Pig' Job on Eisenhower's Request

ments and supply, requests for decisions, summaries of intelligence, poured into Operations Division from every continent and from the islands of the Pacific still held by us and our Allies. Occasionally trivial in content, most often far-reaching in strategic import, sometimes inspiring and sometimes calamitous, the decoded messages that crossed my desk during those days were constant reminders that America was engaged in a global war, fighting a desperate delaying battle in some places where heroic men still held out, in others building the bases and extending the air and sea pathways for a counteroffensive, persistently striving to inch forward on a front that circled the earth.

The study of messages received and the preparation of those to be sent were interrupted constantly by conferences on a multitude of topics with representatives of all the armed services, with Government officials and industrial leaders, and with Allied agents.

Most of the conferences were held in my own office. Out of them were developed decisions, many minor, but some of great significance. Each required action at some point within the Operations Division or the War Department or at some remote point where troops of the Army were stationed.

To insure that none would be forgotten and that records for subordinates would always be available, we had resorted to an automatic recording system that proved most effective.

The method was a complete wiring of my war room with dictaphones so placed as to pick up every word uttered in the room. Conversations were thus recorded on a machine just outside my office where a secretary instantly transcribed them into notes and memoranda for the benefit of my associates in the Operations Division.

As a consequence, and often without further reference to me, the staff was able to translate every decision and agreement into appropriate action and to preserve such records as were necessary.

I made it a habit to inform visitors of the system that we used so that each would understand its purpose was merely to facilitate the execution of business. It saved me hours of work in the dictation of notes and directives and relieved my mind of the necessity of remembering every detail of fact and opinion that was presented to me.

One problem that gave the War Department continuing concern was that of securing practical battlefield experience for portions of the Army before the whole of it should finally be thrown into a life-and-death struggle.

One morning we received a suggestion that appeared so completely sensible that the entire operations staff started to work on it. The idea was to ship one of our armored divisions to reinforce the British Army in the Egyptian desert. Then when definite American need for this division arose we would bring out only the personnel, leaving its equipment as replacement items for the British forces.

For commander of such a unit my mind turned instantly to one of my oldest friends, Major General George S. Patton jr., who was not only a tank expert but an outstanding leader of troops. I was astonished to find my choice flatly opposed by a considerable portion of the staff, but I was convinced that this was due entirely to Patton's rather bizarre mannerisms and his sometimes unpredictable actions. He conformed to no pattern—a circumstance that made many fearful of his ability to fit into a team.

Such doubts had no influence with me because of my confidence in his fighting heart and my conviction that he would provide effective leadership for combat troops. I felt that I knew him well because, at the end of the first World War, he and I had formed a fast friendship that could even include heated, sometimes almost screaming, argument over matters that more often than not were doctrinal and academic rather than personal or material.

With approval of the Chief of Staff, I called Patton to Washington and, though I knew the answer in advance, asked him whether he was willing to step down from command of his training corps to take a division into actual battle.

His answer was in pleasing contrast to that of another corps commander who, when asked to take command of an American combat corps in the Pacific, declined on the basis that it was not fitting that he, a senior corps commander, should serve under an Australian "amateur" soldier.

The desert project for the employment of Patton's division was defeated largely by lack of available shipping.

Development of the Operations Division went so well that my key assistants and I gradually gained more time for thinking and study. We could safely leave routine operations in the hands of a group of outstanding young staff officers, supervised by Brig. Gens. Thomas T. Handy, Matthew B. Ridgway and Robert W. Crawford, and Cols. John E. Hull and Albert C. Wedemeyer, all of whom came into deserved Army prominence before the end of the war.

The question before the War Department resolved itself into the selection of the exact line of operations along which the potential power of the United States would be best directed against the European Axis. This decision, once reached, would be the guiding principle of the war until Germany was defeated; all other operations and efforts would necessarily be considered as auxiliary or secondary to the main thrust, and would be designed either to defend vital links in our defensive structure or to support the principal effort when once the main attacking forces should be ready.

Best Avenue to Europe

By comparison with other possible avenues of approach, considering the need for concentration, quick access to the heart of the enemy country, avoidance of impassable terrain obstacles, and rapidity of build-up, the best choice was invasion of northwest Europe, using England as a base.

All these things were so obvious as to be axiomatic; there was no quarrel. But from that point on we encountered the obstacle on which all discussions split and practically exploded in our faces. This was a very definite conviction, held by some of our experienced soldiers, sailors, and airmen, that the fortified coast of western Europe could not be successfully attacked. Already much was known of the tremendous effort the German was making to insure integrity of his Atlantic wall. Moreover, a considerable amount of the German Air Force could still be disposed in those areas, and important elements of his fleet were lying in the harbors of northern France, in Norway, and in the Baltic Sea. The coast line was crowded with U-boat nests, while undersea mining was rapidly covering every possible approach.

Few Differed

A very few—initially a very, very few—took a contrary view. General Marshall, who had already been informed of the basic conception on which we were working, was one of the believers. Others were Major Generals McNarney and Carl Spaatz of the Air Corps, while my little band of faithful assistants in the Operations Division, including Generals Handy and Crawford, and Colonels Hull and Wedemeyer, were nothing less than enthusiasts.

In the aggregate, not many officers were really aware of the existence of the project, nor had they heard any of the great arguments pro and con that went into its making. Many with whom we had to consult were always ready to express doubts of the blackest character, but these never discouraged the group responsible for the preparation of the project.

This group held that if we would plan for an operation on the assumptions that our Air Force would be, at the chosen moment, overwhelming in strength; that the German air forces would be virtually swept from the skies and our air bombers could practically isolate the attack area from rapid reinforcement; that the U-boat would be so effectively countered that our convoys could count with comparative certainty on making a safe Atlantic crossing; that our supporting naval vessels would be present in strength to batter down local defenses and that specialized landing craft could be available in such numbers as to make possible the rapid pouring ashore of a great army through an initial breach—then the assault against the Atlantic wall was not only practicable but would lead to the definite defeat of Germany. Moreover, this tiny group solidly held that no other operation could do more than peck at the outer perimeter of the German defense; that unless this particular campaign were undertaken the prospect of defeating Germany on land was completely black.

Scheme Explained

These reasons and supporting arguments, coupled with a great number of technical papers, were finally drawn up in a tentative strategic outline for presentation to the Chief of Staff. He had been aware, of course, of its preparation.

With his usual receptiveness and open-mindedness, General Marshall invited a full explanation of the scheme. The burden of proof, the very basis of the whole plan, had to be taken almost almost on faith.

This basis was the conviction that through an overpowering air force, numbering its combat strength in thousands rather than in hundreds, the German's defenses could be beaten down or neutralized, his communications so badly impaired as to make counterconcentration difficult, his air force swept from the skies, and that our ground armies would have an ever-present asset of incalculable power. Without this conviction the whole plan was visionary. Yet there was no way of proving this particular point because, among other things, the airplanes we needed did not then exist.

The Chief of Staff listened patiently through long presentations and at the end said, "This is it. I approve."

Hopkins Goes to London

He immediately conferred with Admiral King and General Arnold, who also approved. The next step was to secure the approval of the President. Then our Allies would have to be convinced.

The President directed General Marshall to proceed to London. With him went Mr. Harry L. Hopkins, intimate assistant of the President. They departed April 7.

During the succeeding months I was to have many meetings with Mr. Hopkins. Preoccupied with the war, I never learned, at first hand, much about his personal political philosophy, a subject of bitter argument throughout his tour of public service in Washington. But he was almost fanatically loyal to the President and his loyalty did not hesitate to express itself, when he deemed it necessary, in opposition and prolonged argument.

He had a grasp of the broad factors in military problems that was almost phenomenal and he was selflessly devoted to the purpose of expediting victory. He never spared himself, even during those periods when his health was so bad that his doctors ordered him to bed. His function as a lieutenant to the President with an endless variety of jobs, mainly concerned with the prosecution of the war, absorbed his full attention and made him a most important figure.

Details Not Revealed

Concerning the details of the negotiations in London, General Marshall has never talked to me. I do know that he came back with the agreement between the British and American Governments to make the attack across the English Channel the principal offensive effort of the two governments in Europe. This decision was made in April, 1942.

History has proved that nothing is more difficult in war than to adhere to a single strategic plan. Unforeseen and glittering promise on the one hand and unexpected difficulty or risk upon the other present constant temptation to desert the chosen line of action in favor of another. This one was no exception—realization of the plan was far removed from its making and countless occasions were to arise when argument, blandishment, and exhortation would seek its abandonment. But the war in Europe was finally won because through every trial and every temptation—in spite of difficulty, delay, pressure, and profitable preliminary operations in the Mediterranean which themselves offered a temptation to forsake the original concept—the President, General Marshall, and many others never wavered from their purpose of launching a full-out invasion of Europe across the English Channel at the earliest practicable moment.

In May, 1942, General Eisenhower was sent to London to make a quick survey of our forces in Great Britain. Less than a month later, he prepared a draft directive for the commanding general of the European theater of operations, and General Marshall suddenly told him that he was the man who would also carry out the directive.

In June of the same year, he went back to London again to begin the great crusade for Europe. Plans were made and discarded, public pressure for a "second front" was growing, the United States was transforming the British Isles into a platform for invasion of the continent. On July 24, the invasion of Africa, known by the code word "Torch," was decided on, and Eisenhower was named to command it. This is described in tomorrow's installment of "Crusade in Europe," which will be published here.

This is a condensed serialization of Dwight D. Eisenhower's "Crusade in Europe." It contains highlights of the book to be published November 22, 1948, by Doubleday & Co. Copyrighted by Doubleday & Co., Inc.

Yugoslavia Denies Aid Pact With U. S.

London, Nov. 8 (U.P.).—The Yugoslav government tonight officially denied published reports that it had signed a military agreement with the United States calling for mutual aid in event of war with Russia.

The Yugoslav information office here said the report appearing in the Italian weekly L'Europeo was "completely fabricated and ranks among the usual falsehoods which have been spreading of late against Yugoslavia."

Ex.-Gen. Meyers Loses His Appeal

By The Associated Press

Bennett E. Meyers, former Army Air Force general, yesterday lost his appeal from the conviction that sent him to jail.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the conviction by a 2-to-1 decision. Since last March, Meyers has been in the District of Columbia Jail, serving a sentence of from 20 months to 5 years.

The specific charge against him was subornation of perjury—inducing another person to lie. It broke in a sensational hearing by the Senate War Investigating Committee last year, which looked into the affairs of a war contracting firm, the Aviation Electric Co., of Dayton, Ohio.

Meyers was accused of being the owner of the firm, while setting up young Bleriot La Marre as the dummy president and getting La Marre to lie about this to the Senate committee.

Stripped of Honors

Meyers, now 53, was chief purchasing officer for the Army Air Forces during the war. He won the Distinguished Service Medal and the Legion of Merit—decorations that were stripped from him along with his rank and retirement pay when the scandal broke. President Truman cashiered him from the armed services last July.

The majority of the Appeals Court held that:

1. The prosecution in the District Court proved that La Marre falsely testified to a Senate subcommittee that Meyers had no financial interest in the Aviation Electric Co.

2. The subcommittee was lawfully constituted.

3. William P. Rogers, committee counsel, was properly permitted to testify at the trial as to La Marre's statements before the subcommittee.

Testimony Reversed

(Before the subcommittee, La Marre testified that Meyers had no connection with Aviation Electric. Later, before the full committee, he reversed his story and gave what he called the true account—that Meyers owned it secretly.)

4. Meyers was properly indicted. The defense contended that if he were to have been indicted at all, it should have been under the Federal perjury statute.

The court majority was made up of Judges Wilbur K. Miller and James M. Proctor. The dissenting opinion came from Judge E. Barrett Prettyman.

Judge Prettyman said that committee Counsel Rogers was improperly permitted to give "an interpretation" of what La Marre said before the subcommittee. The judge added:

"Upon examination of the official stenographic transcript of what La Marre said to the Senate committee, the trial court should have directed a verdict of acquittal upon this indictment. The basic issue presented by the defense was whether La Marre said what the indictment alleged he said. The issue was not what La Marre said generally in other respects."

The Supreme Court kept on its "pending" list a renewed review petition from 11 leaders of the Joint Anto-Fascist Refugee Committee, convicted of contempt for withholding their committee records from a House committee subpena. Last June the 11 were denied a review.

In another action, the high court agreed to review a lower court decision throwing out an NLRB order on grounds it was "biased and prejudiced." The NLRB in that case had ordered the Pittsburgh Steamship Co. to stop discouraging sailors on its Great Lakes fleet from joining the CIO National Maritime Union.

The Supreme Court refused to review a Missouri court decision upholding a "quickie" divorce in Nevada, attacked on grounds that the person getting it left the State two weeks later.

Boring, Oreg., Nov. 8 (AP).—A lumber mill worker had his arm cut off at the shoulder yesterday, and then walked more than a mile to this town to get an ambulance to Portland.

State police said Henry Francis Meeker, 62, of Sandy, was given a "fair" chance of recovering at a Portland hospital.

He was cleaning a planer at a mill near here when his right garment sleeve tangled in the machine and pulled his arm into the cutter. He was alone. He first attempted to drive the distance in his automobile.

Expert Rules on Truth for Cancer Patient

Boston, Nov. 8 (AP).—A cancer authority said today that sometimes it is better to spare a patient the whole truth.

Dr. Charles C. Lund of the American Cancer Society, told the American Public Health Association:

"There are some circumstances under which the doctor cannot, for the patient's good, tell him the whole truth."

But what if a patient asks directly—"Is this cancer?"

Then, Dr. Lund says, "the doctor is forced to answer 'yes.'"

Should Reduce Shock

But Dr. Lund said, the doctor "can always go on to explain in the same sentence . . . in a way that can reduce greatly the shock that is always associated with the bald assertion."

Dr. Lund reported the blunt statement "this is a cancer" would be taken differently by patients and mean "hopeless cancer" to many.

Some patients, he said, might decide against treatment because they believed there is no cure. Others might "leave a doctor and go to a charlatan in whose hands all hope would be lost."

But he cautioned as well against minimizing the patient's case since that might lead some "to delay so long as to lose their chance of cure."

Truth After Operation

"The whole truth must be told after an operation," Dr. Lund said.

With "hopeless cases," he explained, the truth is better "almost always."

"Dying patients," Dr. Lund added, "usually have a fairly good insight into their condition. Another reason is that they can relax and stop struggling to do all the things they have previously been doing to try to get well and to keep up their own or their family's morale."

At an earlier session, the association was told that cancer of the stomach may be discovered early by a new X-ray method which takes only 6 minutes.

Three Johns Hopkins doctors, John F. Roach, Robert D. Sloan and Russell H. Morgan, reporting the method, said 60,000 men and 42,000 women over 40 develop stomach cancer every year and that "almost 60 per cent die within one year of diagnosis."

Sign Affidavits, Union Is Urged

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—The executive board of the CIO United Office and Professional Workers has recommended that the union's officers sign non-Communist affidavits in compliance with the Taft-Hartley law.

The board's recommendation was announced today by Union President James Durkin who said the proposal now goes to the member ship for its approval. A membership referendum voted against compliance last August.

The decision will affect only two of the union's five top-ranking officers, Durkin and Bernard J. Mooney, secretary-treasurer-elect. Mooney succeeds John Stanley who resigned his post an the ground that his principles are opposed to the Taft-Hartley Act.

The union's three vice presidents have been retitled as division heads, and, as such, are not required to file the affidavits, an official said.

A spokesman indicated that it was expected the board's recommendation would be approved by the locals. They have been directed to meet before the end of next week to vote on the measure.

Virtually all motion-picture companies whose New York offices employed UOPWA members have refused to deal with the union because its officers have not filed affidavits. The Prudential Life Insurance Co., which employes an estimated 14,000 union members as agents, has taken the same stand.

Durkin said that he and Mooney now favor signing the affidavits because of the "danger" to the union of following a non-compliance policy.

He said that they were taking the step "reluctantly," however, and would continue to voice their opposition to the Taft-Hartley law and its provisions.

Union Shop Contract Signed Without Election Ruled Illegal in Unanimous NLRB Decision

By the United Press

The National Labor Relations Board ruled unanimously yesterday that a union shop contract not made in accordance with provisions of the Taft-Hartley law is illegal.

The board found that C. Hager & Sons Manufacturing Co., St. Louis, and United Steelworkers (CIO) has signed a union shop agreement on August 22, 1947, without going through the union shop election provided by the Taft-Hartley statute.

Its decision makes almost certain a similar finding in a pending case involving John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers and the steel companies owning coal mines. The steel firms signed the present union shop agreement with the miners after a week-long strike last July. The union refused to petition for a union shop election, and the companies filed unfair labor charges.

In the St. Louis case, the board held that since no union shop election was held as provided by law, "the union shop provision is illegal, even if no action has been taken pursuant to it."

"The mere existence of such a provision," the board commented, "acts as a restraint upon those desiring to refrain from union activities with the meaning of Section 7 of the act, and is evidence that the steelworkers and the employer are in accord in denying employment to those who refuse to join the union within the required time."

The NLRB, in another case, yesterday refused to break up a big industrial bargaining unit of the United Auto Workers (CIO) in the General Motors Corp., Chevrolet division at Detroit.

The board voted 4 to 0 to dismiss a petition from the Brotherhood of Blacksmiths (AFL) for an election among employes of the forging plant. The AFL union filed under the Taft-Hartley law yhich permits the severance of crafts from industry-wide units.

The labor board pointed out that crafts units in the auto industry have been established only for die sinkers and pattern-makers since 1940. It found that the blacksmiths' requested unit was not a true craft group.

Court Refuses to Stay 12 Communists' Trial

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today refused to order a delay in the scheduled trial of 12 members of the national board of the Communist Party.

The court also put over until Wednesday a motion by defense counsel for a writ directing Federal Judge Harold R. Medina to disqualify himself in the case.

The 12 Communist Party officials are scheduled to go to trial next Mondty on an indictment and advocate the violent overthrow of the Government. charging they conspired to organize the Communist Party to teach

Printers Here Seek Approval Of Strike Vote

The executive council of the International Typographical Union (AFL) yesterday had before it a petition from local newspaper printers seeking approval of a strike vote.

James J. O'Connor, president of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101, representing some 650 printers on Washington newspapers, reported a special meeting of the union Sunday voted overwhelmingly to seek strike vote sanction. The vote, at Pythian Temple, 1012 9th st. nw., was 260 to 4, he declared.

O'Connor said the union has been "unable to get the publishers to make any concessions" in negotiations since September 11. The union seeks higher wages—from $85 to $100 for the day shift, $90 to $110 for the night shift and 95 to $110 for the lobster (third) shift. Other demands include a reduction in hours for lobster shift workers, an additional week's vacation, sick leave and a pension plan.

Longshoremen Reject Offer

by the West Coast waterfront strike is costing the people of those Pacific islands nearly $500,000 a day.

The costly consequences of the dispute between the longshoremen and West Coast waterfront employers were reported Saturday to a special meeting of Honolulu's Chamber of Commerce by its president, Lorrin P. Thurston, publisher of the Honolulu Advertiser.

Urging that Congress give Hawaii protection against recurring waterfront strikes, Thurston told 500 members of the chamber that Hawaii and Alaska should not be placed on the sacrificial altar each time a dispute arises between maritime unions and shipowners.

The present strike—now in its third month—is the fifth major tie-up of Hawaii's shipping since 1934.

"October retail business in the Hawaiian Islands dropped 12 million dollars, and the prospect looms for even greater losses during the current month," Thurston said.

"Stevedores who work in Hawaii's usually busy ports have themselves been deprived of $340,000 in wages. Home building in the Territory has come to a virtual standstill."

Picket Line Maintained In Defiance of Sheriff

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 8 (AP).—CIO smelter workers defied Sheriff Ralph J. Paul today and kept a 30-man picket line outside the American Zinc Oxide Co. plant.

Company officials had hoped to reopen the plant—strikebound since August 13—this morning. When the union massed strikers at the main gate, Paul and six deputies drove up.

The sheriff said the pickets were violating the State Riot Act. He gave them an hour to leave.

"We'll maintain our lines," said Raymond Dennis of Cleveland, an international union representative, "until we win the strike."

Two hours after his deadline, the sheriff said he would not move against the pickets unless the company obtained a court injunction against mass picketing. The company said its attorneys were drafting the petition and it would be filed as soon as possible.

The sheriff said he decided not to arrest the pickets because he did not want to risk having someone hurt under the circumstances.

The roads are alive with DYNAFLOW Drives!

ONCE in a blue moon something happens to make driving a car a brand-new sensation—and 1948 is such a year.

Look about you on the highways. Spot the Buicks with the word "Dynaflow"* modestly lettered in the ornament on the trunk, or neatly inscribed on the forward fenders.

Then note the relaxed ease with which the folks in these cars glide through traffic — start, stop, start again — take their openings with a nimble smoothness that's a joy to see.

Note also that all this is done without lifting hand from steering wheel, and you'll get a clue to what's behind this driving magic.

Gone is the clutch and clutch pedal. Gone is all gearshifting as you've known it before. Gone is the need for manual or mechanical shifting of any kind, during all normal forward driving.

You press the treadle — the power plant does the rest — and you can't begin to realize what this means till you try it.

That's why the roads are alive with Dynaflow Drives—why everyone who's been able to get one of these driving marvels has one — and why production is being greatly stepped up in the Buick factories, to meet the continually mounting demand.

Better find out what it's all about. Ask a friend, see a Buick dealer, and know this thrill firsthand.

Then, we predict, you'll want to place an order — and it's good to know you can do that, with or without a car to trade.

*You get Dynaflow Drive, at extra cost, on ROADMASTERS only.

Zone Board Defers Order on Lodgings

In a Week

96 Parking Tickets Adjusted

A Washington motorist, who violated a parking regulation when he took his 90-year-old aunt to the hospital after she had fallen, was one of 96 motorists for whom traffic tickets were "fixed" last week.

He was Charles E. Gilbert of 3410 Morrison st. nw., who was granted a warning for parking in a "no parking from 4 to 6:30 p. m." zone after he explained about the emergency, police said.

Traffic tickets were canceled for 10 motorists because of diplomatic immunity. They were: Tomas Benitez, Philippine Embassy, standing in a "no standing from 4 to 6:30 p. m." zone; Mario Fantini, Italian Embassy, parked in a bus stop; Adnan Pachachi, Embassy of Iraq, parked overtime and parked less than 3 feet from another vehicle; Thomas H. Mansy, Embassy of Iraq, parked in entrance; Vladmir P. Voladin, Russian Embassy, parked in bus stop.

Ricardo Balinotti, Argentine Embassy, parked in a "no parking from 4 to 6 p. m." zone; Helen de Blank, Netherlands Embassy, standing in a "no standing from 4 to 6:30 p. m." zone; Elio Bondi, Italian Embassy, obstructing an alley; Jacques L. Floersheim, 2931 28th st. nw., parked in a "no parking at any time" zone; Oscar F. Lozano, Mexican Embassy, parked in a "no parking at any time" zone.

The District Zoning Commission yesterday extended to October 1, 1949, the temporary rooming and boarding house privileges in A-restricted and A-semirestricted residential areas.

The action followed a hearing last month in which extension was asked by many residents, who claimed the housing shortage still is too severe to return to prewar restrictions.

The commission also announced it was deferring action on several changes in parking regulations, also discussed at the hearing on October 13. The commission said a committee has been appointed to coordinate all parking interests in Washington before further changes in the regulations are made.

Committee on Parking

Named to head the committee is Robert O. Clouser, executive officer of the commission and its director of planning. Others who will serve are P. Y. K. Howat, chairman of the Motor Vehicle Parking Agency; Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; George Keneipp, director of Vehicles and Traffic, and representatives yet to be appointed by the Washington Board of Trade, the Home Builders Association, the American Institute of Architects, the Washington Real Estate Board, and other organizations which may wish to participate.

The Zoning Commission stated it has approved an amendment to the zoning ordinance permitting churches in the A-residential district more ground privileges. Robert Clouser said the amended ordinance will extend the amount of ground which churches may occupy on their lots from 40 to 60 per cent.

In Gas Plant Area

The Commission has instructed its zoning staff to make a zoning survey of the gas plant area in the "Foggy Bottom" region with "a view toward a possible rezoning." The property is now zoned industral and second commercial. The Washington Gas Light Co., which owns most of the property, plans to take down all but one of its gas storage tanks. The expected rezoning would be to residential use, one official said.

Adam A. Weschler & Sons are auctioning off nearly 300,000 square feet of gas company property today. It lies between F and H sts. nw., Virginia and New Hampshire aves., 27th st., and is bounded on the west by Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway.

The couple left on a trip after a quiet ceremony here Saturday. They expect to be in Cincinnati, where Randolph will be a delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention.

It is Randolph's second marriage. His first wife died more than a year ago.

Fire Routs 750, Perils Air Base

Orange, Calif., Nov. 8 (U.P.).—The second disastrous fire in four days flared out of control in the Santa Ana mountains today.

Driven by 50-mile-an-hour winds, it forced more than 750 persons to flee their homes and threatened the big El Toro marine air base.

Flames flared up in a smoldering "hot spot" in Black Star canyon shortly before dawn and spread rapidly over the brush-covered mountains. The almost inaccessible canyon was the last stubborn spot left from a 40-square mile blaze brought under control Saturday.

Within less than 6 hours, 15,000 acres of brushland was blackened.

The State forestry service ordered residents of Silverado, Modjeska and Trabuco canyons out of their homes, and some 700 fire fighters swarmed into the area.

Some 150 marines from the El Toro base joined volunteer, State and Federal fire fighters. Other marines piled wet sandbags on the 942 buildings at the airbase to prevent damage from falling embers.

Amherst Frat Will Initiate Negro Athlete

Amherst, Mass., Nov. 8 (AP).—The Amherst College chapter of Phi Kappa Psi announced today Tom Gibbs, sophomore Negro athlete, would be initiated as a member despite opposition from some of the fraternity's national officers.

Frederick D. Greene 2d, president of the Amherst chapter, said Gibbs' initiation would be November 23.

Gibbs, whose home is Evanston, Ill., is a runner on the Amherst varsity cross-country team and an elected member of the college's student council.

Greene said Gibbs' initiation was held up until the fraternity's 54 chapters could be polled. Only a third responded to the poll, Greene said, with nearly a half opposed to accepting him, a third in favor and the others noncommittal.

Greene said the Amherst chapter wanted to remain affiliated with the national organization but was determined to initiate Gibbs at the cost of having its chapter charter revoked.

Court Hears Vote Argued

called for "legislation" to correct it. The 1940 Gwynne Act was the answer, they said.

But when Marshall said "legislation," he meant a constitutional amendment, declared Wendell D. Allen, representing the Tidewater Company. He said it was a "peanut-minded slant" to believe Marshall was talking of "mere legislation."

With a smile, he said, there are "many benefits that citizens of the District have that we poor folks in the States do not . . . From the televised effect we got in the past week (referring to President Truman's welcome here) they enjoyed the election in Washington as much as we did ourselves."

Perlman Contradicted

Allen scoffed at Perlman's statement on congressional power over the District, saying:

"He must have his tongue in his cheek when he says Congress can make a State out of the District without a constitutional amendment."

He pointed out a Government brief stating that the District had changed completely since Chief Justice Marshall's day, with some 3550 corporations paying taxes here. With this situation, he said, "Congress can do a little housecleaning and get back to the original concept as a seat of Government."

Francis B. Burch, Allen's associate, said upholding the Gwynne Act would result in confusion, with many judgments attacked on grounds that State courts which made them "never had jurisdiction in the first instance."

Bress said this "anxiety" was unnecessary, for the Federal and State court power would be concurrent.

"If a citizen of Alexandria, Va., should go into Baltimore to sue a resident of Maryland," he declared, "he should have no more rights there than a citizen of the District of Columbia."

He and Perlman noted that on the constittuional issue they were speaking only for the District because of its "special" position of "inheriting" certain State rights, and not for the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska, also covered by the Gwynne Act.

Said Justice Frankfurter with a grin: "They could come in and argue they (the Hawaiians) are descendants of aliens." (Under the Constitution, aliens have the same access to Federal Courts as States' citizens.)

"Maybe we should take that up first," put in Justice Jackson.

Countered Bress: "I would be glad to represent them."

Hospitals to Ask Federal Aid For Care of Indigent Persons

The American Hospital Association will ask the next Congress for Federal aid to the Nation's hospitals for care of the "medically indigent," hospital administrators were told yesterday.

The legislative proposal was disclosed by Joseph G. Norby, AHA president, in a luncheon address to delegates attending the eighth annual conference of the Maryland-District of Columbia Hospital Association, at Hotel Statler.

Such Government aid, Norby said, will be sought "on a non-political basis" by which Federal grants-in-aid would be apportioned to the States for State administration of disbursements.

He pointed out that most hospitals operate at a loss more because of medically indigent patients than actual paupers. The medically indigent, he said, are those patients who can meet their own living expenses normally, but who cannot pay hospitalization costs when sickness or accidents arise.

Norby also announced that the AHA has approved a plan admitting the Delaware (State) Hospital District of Columbia Hospital Association, making the group a tri-State AHA member unit. Heretofore, the Delaware organization operated as an independent unit member of the national organization.

At a panel session yesterday afternoon, Louis Justement, District architect, advocated that a community's hospital needs be met by more smaller hospitals rather than "one big new one."

A hospital, he said, need only be large enough to justify complete medical facilities. Beyond that, said the architect, the hospital "passes the human scale" and the patient may become "merely a cog in a great machine."

Benjamin W. Wright, superintendent of Memorial Hospital, Cumberland, Md., was installed as president of the regional organization at its annual banquet last night. He succeeds James G. Capossela, administrator of Emergency Hospital.

Schmelzer Elected

Elected president-elect for the coming year was Leo G. Schmelzer, of George Washington University Hospital here.

Principal speaker at last night's banquet was the Rev. Edmond A. Walsh, SJ, vice president of Georgetown University, who spoke on the threats of totalitarian materialism. Father Walsh termed "encouraging" the general unrest among American scientists on "the wisdom of using the atomic bomb on Japan."

He compared this "moral uneasiness" with the "conscienceless" medical experiments on humans as practiced by Nazi scientists, and the "equally cold materialism" of Russia's practice of "working its millions of slave laborers till the last dying ounce of their energy."

223 Building Permits

Fairfax County issued 223 building permits with an estimated value of $1,484,800 during October. Total value of permits issued this year to October 1 was $17,840,723. Construction this year is lagging far behind 1947 when permits for buildings valued at $24,536,969 were issued in the first 10 months. The figure for October, 1947 was $5,586,152.

Outlook For Home Rule

The blind operations of the seniority rule in the Senate are full of promise for the District of Columbia in the two years ahead. For the chairmanship of the Senate District Committee the indicator points at Senator Holland of Florida, a man of good judgment and progressive leanings and an ardent supporter of home rule for the District. The new head of the Senate Subcommittee on District Appropriations will apparently be Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming whose previous service in that capacity has proved his understanding of local problems and his unwillingness to look upon the District as merely a political orphan. While both these prospective appointments must be attributed to good luck rather than good management, they are a source of much satisfaction to District residents.

On the House side the outlook is less favorable. The chairmanship of the House District Committee goes to Representative McMillan of South Carolina, who was floor leader of the opposition in the fight for District home rule last spring. Fortunately, Congressman Auchincloss, the author of the Home Rule bill, was reelected and he will doubtless reintroduce the revised and simplified bill that has been worked out during the summer by his staff of experts. With Mr. McMillan head of the committee that had jurisdiction over the bill, however, the chance of its emerging for prompt enactment does not appear to be good. Probably the best strategy this time will be to have the bill introduced in the Senate as well as the House.

Senator Holland was a member of the joint Senate-House Committee which gave final shape to the Auchincloss bill, and has been one of the most skillful sponsors of District home rule. We hope that he will lose no time in getting this issue before his committee and the Senate so that it will not be caught in the last-minute rush of business as was the Auchincloss bill in the House this year. If President Truman, who is firmly on record as favoring District home rule, makes it a part of his legislative program the outlook for favorable action will be greatly improved.

Greek Executions

Judging from the turmoil in the United Nations Assembly over the executions in Greece, Yugoslavia nearly succeeded in its maneuver to divert attention from the main issue under consideration. The issue was whether Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania have continued to aid the Greek guerillas in defiance of the United Nations. Happily, despite the flurry caused by the Yugoslav charges against the Greek government and Assembly President Evatt's successful appeals for a stay in executions, the United Nations did not lose the quarry. The political committee has voted 43-0 to uphold the conclusion that the three Russian satellites still are abetting the Greek rebels.

Mr. Evatt's action in getting a stay in the case of 10 men under death sentence for aiding the guerilla General Markos will be generally applauded. Greece is in the spotlight, and the total of 1951 executions since the liberation does not make a pretty picture. However, in appraising the course followed by the Greek government, it must not be forgotten that Greece is fighting for its life in that most brutal of all conflicts, a civil war. And the Communists have had a propaganda field day in distorting the facts and playing on Western sympathies, as Yugoslavia has done.

Actually there have been few or no summary executions, and the great majority of persons tried have escaped with sentences involving prison terms or exile. Of 35,244 individuals tried for guerilla activity since the liberation, 6314 have been acquitted altogether. A total of 19,681 have been sent into exile or temporarily detained in prison camps, and another 4560 have been sentenced to prison terms. A total of 1951 persons have been executed, and another 2738 remain under death sentence for their part in the Communist uprisings of December, 1944 and January, 1945.

Most trials involving guerilla activity are conducted by military court-martial. Courts consist of five members, most of them judicial officials. All trials are public, and the defendant is entitled to counsel of his own choice. Sentences vary with the responsibility involved. Most rank-and-file guerilla followers, for example, are released without trial. Those tried are prosecuted for definite criminal acts, such as murder and sabotage. If the death sentence is the result of a 3-2 decision, appeal is automatic; otherwise, execution is mandatory within three days under Greek law.

When the fact is considered that the guerillas have no belligerent status, and that all of them are traitors in the eyes of the state, it is apparent that Greek justice is not the heinous thing it has been pictured. Where the standards employed in Greece are open to real question is in their effect as a deterrent on further guerilla action. From the reports that there are more guerillas today than when the insurrection started, it is obvious that executions are not a check on guerilla activity. Until the average Greek is given something positive to hope for, the executions can do little but add to the blood bath.

China's "Something"

Back of the confusion in China, "something big" is said to be brewing, with military and political chiefs going from one conference into another. A report from Peking indicates that the northern commander, Fu Tso-yi, has refused to assume responsibility for events. It is safe to say this has nothing to do with the grant to him of autonomy in North China. Fu Tso-yi clearly would not refuse to be on his own. What has doubtless happened is that he has exercised his independence to the extent of declining to direct the defense of Nanking which the desperate Chiang Kai-shek appears to have proffered to him while giving him independence.

Fu's attitude makes sense. It would be quixotic on Fu's part to go gallivanting in the direction of Nanking with North China imperilled. He already has his own hands full, for the threat from the Communists to his positions astride the Peking-Suiyuan and Peking-Mukden railroads in intra-mural China (that is, the China this side of the Great Wall) must be considerable, though nobody can tell exactly what the military situation is. All that is clear is that postures are fluid, and the divisions of Fu and of the Communists appear to be scattered over an immense battleground which is shifting rapidly. Fu is now at his Peking headquarters, and he also holds Tientsin, where he could take the material he has long sought from our Nanking-ridden policy-makers in Washington, and deliver it by plane to most places in his jurisdiction which are inaccessible by overland route.

Whether our officials here will be able either to keep step with events or to exercise any resiliency of mind toward the actual and potential changes afoot is the overriding problem. No sensitivity to Chiang's pride need inhibit dealings with the chieftain to whom Chiang has delegated full power in North China, once the Nanking complex is sloughed off. The loose relation of the non-Communist commanders is a Chinese fact in keeping with the loose organization of this continent of a country. The present political earthquake in Nanking, and the widespread dissatisfaction with rule from Nanking, attach fresh importance to the Mohammedan Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, formerly War Minister and a force in Northwestern China; the vice president, Gen. Li Tsung-jen, equally important in the southwest, as well as Gen. Fu Tso-yi, in northern China. All three will bear watching in the event of recognition of the old centrifugalism in China. But for Chiang's centralism, which has been encouraged in Washington, there might have been some chance of keeping the Communists pocketed in the northwestern area they have held for about 15 years.

All this is quite apart from the needs of a policy based squarely upon the American interest in the Far East. Our concern should not be Chinese but American; our outlook should be the Far East of which China is one item, and an item that must be related to the whole. This requires the Administration to follow Chiang's example, treat with the de facto authorities, and hold the key ports not only as supply bases for our friends but also as a safeguard against complete disintegration in China—which is far more of a possibility than its communization.

Government Salaries

A tentative bill drafted by a Senate Civil Service subcommittee calling for increases in the salaries of more than 200 top-rank Government officials should receive the prompt attention of the incoming Congress. For salary increases are imperative to arrest the exodus from the Government of competent men attracted by higher pay offers from private industry. And, as Senator Flanders, head of the subcommittee, points out, there also has to be "bait on the hook" to induce able men to take over vacated Government jobs. The $20,000 payment set by the bill for Cabinet heads, with comparable salaries for heads of independent agencies and commissions, appears to be reasonable, indeed modest, in view of the tremendous percentage rise in prices and in the money incomes of most consumers since the twenties when a $10,000 salary was rightly considered to be fairly generous.

During the intervening years, moreover, the creation of new positions carrying somewhat higher salaries, together with sporadic particularistic increases in the pay of certain officials, has resulted in glaring inequalities in the remuneration of Federal executives regardless of the importance or burdensomeness of their work. The present bill would eliminate these erratic and irritating differences.

Prompt action in raising salaries of top-rank officials is needed for another reason: it would improve the morale of the services which was dealt a severe blow by the action of the Eightieth Congress in excluding from the recently passed pay increase bill officials whose remuneration is fixed by law. As a result, the members of many boards and commissions and some agency heads at the $10,000 level are drawing less pay than their subordinates. Nothing more demoralizing could have been devised. Such a topsy-turvy salary schedule violates all the principles of sound management, as President Truman pointed out when he signed the inadequate pay increase bill under protest.

If the new Congress can be persuaded to deal with the immediately pressing problem of raising salaries in the highest brackets, it can then proceed more deliberately to overhaul the Classification Act and adjust the pay scales of the rank and file of Federal employes. It is sincerely to be hoped that it will also do justice to the employes of the District Government who were denied even the modest flat pay increases given to other Federal workers by the outgoing Congress.

Too Many Brahmins

The Republican defeat, in the view of Representative Joseph W. Martin, is attributable to the fact that the GOP offered the voters "too many Brahmins." It seems to us that Mr. Martin has neglected to look in the mirror—unless, of course, he was including himself synthetically in the description usually accorded the Boston elite. The verdict shows pretty clearly that the Republicans offered too many Martins—and Hallecks and Tabers and Allens—for the voters to swallow. In other words, the record of the Eightieth Congress played a large part in their judgment, and Governor Dewey found himself tagged with that record. Mr. Martin and his fellow obstructionists determined for the most part what legislation the Eightieth Congress enacted and what was shelved or emasculated.

As a matter of fact, the Brahmin influence, if there is such in the Republican Party, has usually been away from the narrow reaction of the old guard. The true Brahmin blueboods would comprise, we suppose, such men as Senators Henry Cabot Lodge and Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts, whose views seem to differ from Mr. Martin's on a good many subjects. Indeed, it is these Senators, plus such other New Englanders as Senators Aiken and Flanders of Vermont, Tobey of New Hampshire and Baldwin of Connecticut (to confine the list to the Senate), who in our opinion constitute the hope of a vital and liberal—accented on its libertarian meaning—Republican Party.

Senator Aiken himself gave an accurate description of the problem. The voters, he said, were "suspicious of the old guard machines of the Republican Party" and "feared that they would not get the right kind of cooperation and legislation." Moreover, "the old guard is a self-perpetuating board of trustees who would rather see the party go down to defeat than give up control of the machinery. The old guard has no appeal to younger voters and, as a result, few if any young Republicans worked in the recent campaign."

The cooperation which Senator Aiken has offered President Truman on certain long-range objectives of national interest indicates one way in which the Republican Party can throw off its shackles and redeem itself without prejudice to a vigorous opposition on methods. The question is what part will be played by Mr. Martin who, despite his attempt to place the blame elsewhere, represents pretty conclusively the type of old guard leadership rejected by the voters.

Drop In Butter

The shift in eating habits from high-priced butter to lower-priced margarine is reflected in a pronounced drop in per capita butter consumption as compared with prewar years and an accompanying rapid increase in margarine consumption. As a result the recent sharp drop in butter prices that would once have gladdened the hearts of housewives is today a matter of indifference to a large proportion of them. For the gap between butter and margarine prices is still too great to encourage any large amount of buying on the part of families that have become accustomed to margarine.

Of course, any decline in the price of a basic commodity such as butter contributes directly or indirectly to a reduction in living costs. Lower butter prices also have the advantage of putting a ceiling, so to speak, on advances in margarine prices by the threat of increased competition with the substitute product. Otherwise little comfort is to be derived from the drop in butter prices as evidence of a general decline in food costs. For, as this newspaper recently pointed out, the factors governing butter prices are in certain respects unique, and do not throw much light on what is likely to happen to other commodities. Indeed, the recent price drop is attributed in good part to lowered milk consumption and this in turn is due to high milk prices—a situation resulting in more milk being converted into butter. That, together with the fact that consumers, who have overcome their prejudice for margarine, have to be offered very substantial price reductions for butter in order to regain their allegiance, appears to explain highly erratic butter price gyrations.

Butter is a commodity in short supply in relation to potential demand. Hence high prices are to be expected. In fact butter prices staged a limited comeback last week. But, as a result of overpricing, it has lost its hold on a large section of the consuming public—possibly forever.

NORTH ALTITUDE

I cannot get used to seeing my friends gray-headed,
Fantastic sight! Incredible masquerade!
Mirth and amazement fetter my tongue
Those white-wigged children! Or these—I saw them wedded,
My two eyes for my witness—they are young!

We were always the young; our elders were most pointed
In snubbing us to place—as still they are—
Though grown a little feeble, with a vagueness
As if their eyes were on a rising star.

Oh, can it be our ship is moving north,
And while we napped, has entered an icy zone,
Where, all at once, we feel the altered air,
And looking up to see where we have blown,
We note the white frost on each other's hair?

Carriers Defended

In your issue of October 23, W. P. calls a carrier "an air base with an eggshell skin." I wonder if he has ever inspected a modern carrier's watertight compartments and pumping arrangements that enable it to take a dozen bomb or torpedo hits without sinking.

Also, it is hard to hit. Thirty B-50s, each dropping 10 bombs from 30,000 feet, might, with luck, get one hit on a carrier, if they could see it. It would take 300 B-50s to get enough hits to sink a large carrier. What the carriers fighters would do to the B-50s meanwhile would be most interesting.

For information on the vulnerability of a carrier to submarines, W. P. might ask any submarine skipper what the chances are of penetrating a screen of 16 listening destroyers loaded with lethal weapons, and scoring a hit off a ship going 30 knots. At such speed the 20-knot submarine has to find itself positioned almost directly ahead of the carrier to have even a theoretical chance of hitting it, such are the relative motion factors involved.

The reasons the carriers did not move against Japan itself until February, 1945, were several. First, they had to capture forward bases for the Air Force, at Guadalcanal, at Makin, at Kwajalein, at Hollandia, at Guam, Saipan and Tinian, at Angaur, at Leyte, Mindoro and Lingayen, and at Iwo Jima. They had to do this because the Air Force is unable to capture its own bases overseas.

As for the cost of a carrier force, we already have all the cruisers and destroyers, and 90 per cent of the carriers, built and paid for. All that is still needed is a modest number of carriers of advanced design to round out the capabilities of the existing investment in the same way that the B-36 helps to round out the Air Force's B-29s and fighters.

Franco's Police State

I take it that Mr. Patrick J. Murphy, in his November 3 letter in support of Franco Spain, has kept in mind the fact that the regime there is a direct result of an invasion of Spain by the German "Condor Legion" and their former allies, the Italian fascists. The government which the Germans and Italians overthrew was the democratically elected government of Spain. Franco is unquestionably a dictator holding down his ill-gotten gains by a police system among the vilest in all history.

As regards Spain's position in a future war between the United States and Russia, there seems little to indicate that we are better liked than the Russians. I do make mental note of the fact that Spain acted as a base for the Nazi submarines, who were not friends of ours in the late great fracas.

The politically naive statement as to mistaken identity of Socialists and Communists is almost unworthy of a reply. It is well known, to students of politics, that socialism and communism are direct and violent enemies. The Falange and the Russian state have far more in common than the Socialists, who are—at least—believers in the Democratic process and the advancement of their cause at the polls rather than the torture chambers.

What I think Mr. Murphy means to say, is that we should support Franco because Franco supports the Catholic Church. For that, I am deeply sorry. It seems almost sinful to see a portion of a great religion become the supporter of a police state to the furtherance of its own political ends.

Service Feud

It is alarming to note an article in The Washington Post of November 1, headed: "Air Force-Navy Feud Is Reopened." This "feud" refers to the "question" of which arm is to be chiefly responsible for long-range bombing in event of another war. I hope a sitting duck of the old school will be pardoned if he presumes to take a peck at the hunters in the present ticklish juncture of world affairs—the atomic bomb being the unknown factor if it is in the hands of our friends, the Russians.

Is it wise to put all our eggs in one basket, as our top flight thinkers seem bent upon doing and then to broadcast to the world that we are so doing? I venture to say not. Would it not be simple wisdom to consider that one or more of our assets may be neutralized or eliminated, in event of war, and therefore to arrange matters so that one may take over where the other fails? I think so. In a word, simple logic would seem to call both for a division of responsibility and increased versatility among our services.

Behind Pageantry

It is a great pity there are people, especially leaders, who take such a narrow view of other religions. The pageantry of some Christian religions is the most natural and logical way people have of showing honor to God by surrounding religion with all the beauty and ceremony at their command.

We salute our flag because it it the symbol of our country, and all it means, not because we are worshiping a wooden staff with a piece of cloth on it. We hang pictures of our loved ones in our homes to recall them to mind better. We put flowers on the graves of our loved and honored ones, as a symbol of our devotion. When people are invested with special offices, we have appropriate ceremony as an outward sign of the importance of the work and in honor of the person who has been selected to do it—not merely in honor of the person himself!

A person of wide mental scope, to say nothing of Christian consciousness, looks behind the pageantry of religions and sees the difficult life of sacrifice and hard work religions of all faiths lead. He sees them in hospitals, orphanages, homes for the aged and destitute, in the mission field, in the most barren places, without even the bare necessities of life, sometimes. This, in return for a mere pittance!

The reason communism has made so much progress in the world is because there are so many Christians who have so little appreciation of Christianity!

Taft-Hartley Law Repeal

"The Taft-Hartley Law Must Be Repealed." This is the headline on front pages after the election.

Apparently the election returns were not studied. Of Governor Dewey's 189 electoral votes, 140 came from the following industrialized States: Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. The only industrialized States that voted for President Truman were those which have a relatively higher rural population than the above, such as Illinois and Ohio, which gave 53 votes for Mr. Truman. As an offset to these two, agricultural Indiana, which has a great many industries, voted for Dewey.

As for the popular vote in these States, despite the fact that the Democratic votes were 3 million less in 1948 than in 1944, Governor Dewey received a larger number of popular votes in 1948 than in 1944 in Connecticut, Delaware and Pennsylvania. Apparently the preponderance of the votes for President Truman came from the agricultural voters. The farmers were satisfied with the high prices they are now receiving.

The assumption that the voters gave a mandate to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act looks ridiculous in the light of the comparison of the votes in 1944 and 1948. The Taft-Hartley Act was not an issue then. All the above industrial States that voted against Governor Dewey in 1944, voted for him in 1948. Presumably, the rank and file of workers thus voted to retain the Taft-Hartley law.

The Democratic platform, to attract the labor vote, promised to repeal the Taft-Hartley Act, but the vote in industrial States says clearly, "Do not do so." The politicians seem to be rushing at top speed in the wrong direction.

This is not the time or place to point out the merits or benefits of the Taft-Hartley Act. But anyone taking the trouble to look for the facts know that under the Taft-Hartley Act union membership actually increased and wages rose. Furthermore, the number of man-days lost in strikes diminished, so that wage increases were accomplished without the cruel waste inflicted on the workers through prolonged strikes, such as preceded the Taft-Hartley Act.

The Taft-Hartley Act is unique in the history of American legislature. This is the only law ever passed which contains a provision for its own amendment and which appointed a follow-up committee of Congress to see how the law worked. Under its provision amendments, enacted with deliberation and not in passion, are inevitable. The new Administration might well continue where the last Congress left off.

In fact, it might well attach to all other future important legislation a provision for automatic amendment and for follow-up committees of Congress. Under such conditions some of the extreme legislation passed in heat and emotion might have been amended to be less destructive. We should not forget that in 1939 after six years of the New Deal, the unemployment figure for January, 1939, was 11,984,000 compared to 11,552,000 in January, 1932. This situation was unique to the United States. It applied to no other country in the world. Employes paid the toll for harsh legislation against employers. Without enterprise, no employment.

The threatened "bust after boom" of which President Truman spoke during the campaign is now his worry. There is little doubt that within the next four years he will have to wrestle with the problem of unemployment and depression. The surest way to accelerate or precipitate that unemployment is to remove the incentive to employers to take risks by repealing the Taft-Hartley Law.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Reconciling The South

WHAT SHOULD not be lost sight of in the astonishment over the most extraordinary upset in American political history is that this is a victory of the middle way. It is a rout of the extreme Right and more especially of the extreme Left.

In that fact is the hope of genuine social progress. Nowhere does this apply more surely than in the South.

It will be easy enough to read the leaders of the Dixiecrat revolt out of the Democratic Party. They made such a poor showing that the leadership of the party in the South will take care of that little item of business. What happened to the Republicrats who went for Herbert Hoover in 1928 and carried five Southern States with them will happen to the Dixiecrats.

But, measured against the background of the problem of the South this is minor. On the record is the stand of the President for civil rights legislation. The platform of the Democratic Party goes even further in declaring for legislation to implement the civil rights program.

On the record, too, is the implacable resistance of almost every element in the South to that program. This is not merely the Dixiecrats and the Talmadgeites.

NOT EVEN the most progressive leaders, such as Jonathan Daniels of Raleigh, N. C., who worked hard and long for President Truman's reelection, could support the kind of legislation which would mean the use of Federal force to compel equality of opportunity. Hodding Carter, publisher and editor of the Greenville, Miss., Delta Democrat-Times and one of the most courageous liberal editors in the South, declared during the campaign for Dewey. Obviously he did so because he could not accept the civil rights program.

In this interim period before the new Congress convenes, what is urgently needed is a workable compromise acceptable to all but extremists in North and South. Such a compromise could mean real progress toward the goals of the President's Civil Rights Commission.

The first step would be to call a conference of Southern leaders. Such a conference should represent virtually all moderate and progressive elements, excluding the white-supremacy diehards and the Dixiecrats.

The logical meeting place is in North Carolina. North Carolina has demonstrated through the years that progress is possible by State and local action. More than any other State, it has shown how the two peoples, Negro and white, can live side by side in harmony with the common goal of equality of opportunity.

To such a conference, held in Raleigh or Chapel Hill, the President could be invited to speak. With the bitterness of the campaign in the past, he could be expected to approach the subject with reason and fairness.

SURELY a middle way which will mean genuine progress is possible. Take, for example, one of the toughest features of the program—a proposed Federal antilynching law. This would mean the use of Federal force to detect, to apprehend and to convict and punish those guilty of the crime of lynching. This goes against the passionate convictions of a large part of the South.

But it would surely be possible to work out Federal-State legislation that would not violate this conviction and yet would strengthen the barriers against lynching. The State law might, for example, provide that when local authorities failed to take effective action in a lynching, the Governor would be required to call on the Federal Government for assistance and the Government in Washington would be required to respond to such a request.

Federal aid to education could be given to the States on condition that they lived up to equality of educational opportunity. This is merely to suggest the form of a workable compromise.

Unless such constructive action is taken, we can expect one of several unhappy results. A political stalemate, after floods of violent Dixiecrat oratory, would produce a deep disillusion among those who voted for Truman in the belief he would remedy known wrongs.

If arbitrary legislation is passed after a bitter battle by a narrow margin, the danger of explosive violence in the South will be increased. It will make hopeless the position of Southern liberals and give the real enemies of the South their long awaited opportunity.

Deprived Voters

When newspapers continue to rave about "apathetic" voters they insult millions of people like me. We couldn't vote in the recent election because we moved from one State to another less than a year ago.

There should be some provision for voting in a national election even though a person has changed location during the past year. It's not a matter of being an alien—after all, I didn't leave the entire 48 United States.

Truman's Victory

Implications Of The Democratic Vote

The most salutary effect of the election, it seems to me, is the jolt is has given to those superficially deterministic socioligists and historians who seem to feel that the people, individually as well as collectively, are in the grip of mysterious social forces and trends from which they cannot break loose. Mr. Roper detected the "trend" scientifically and felt that nothing Mr. Truman or Mr. Dewey did could prevent the people from electing Mr. Dewey President. He, and the rest of us, too, who have been insidiously wooed by the alluring priesthood of the pagan god Science, would not believe what our senses told us.

The polls were probably right for the moment and for the individuals they tested and recorded. The undecided vote was, of course, not pollable. Nor was it possible to determine whether people would change their minds. The polls were wrong on these two counts: they ignored, in their final predictions, the undecided vote, and, especially in the case of Mr. Roper they made the false assumption that people don't change their minds.

Mr. Truman did not happen to get so thoroughly inoculated as the rest of us with Darwinian-Spencerian determinism. He did not understand the subtleties of predetermined human behavior. He naively thought that people might be persuaded to change their minds. And he won. Mr. Truman challenged assumptions no less important than those challenged by Archimedes and Galileo. To him we owe a revitalization of American politics.

A. JOHN ALEXANDER.
Arlington.

The inglorious failure of Gallup & Co. has taught us a good lesson. This failure throws light upon a field much larger than that of election predictions. It should be a warning against the implicit faith in the omnipotence of calculations and mechanical precedures.

Since the resistance of metals or the speed of sound can be calculated, it is taken for granted that the same refers to human social behavior. And since in a car a motor has successfully taken the functions of the horse, it is assumed that human brains could be replaced by calculating and other machines in order to dive into the mystery of human behavior.

The use of quantitative methods of analysis in social sciences is an essential step in scientific progress and should be encouraged. But mere aping of mathematical methods and making a fetish of statistical formulas is bound to bring ludicrous results.

EUGENE M. KULISCHER.
Washington.

Mr. Truman's denunciation of the Eightieth Congress as the worst or second worst there has been was patently unfair. Yet there was just enough suggestion of truth as applied to the special session to give a certain basis for the criticism. Had the Republican majority heeded the council of their wiser leaders, of men like Vandenberg and Lodge, instead of accepting the advice of short-sighted politicians, they might have had substantial achievement to show by completing some of the pending measures which were assured of support in both branches. By so doing they might have retained some of the independent voters they lost and have confounded the Democratic strategists who set a trap for them into which they deliberately walked.

ETHEL M. JOHNSON.
Brownfield, Me.

The cause, I believe, was an obstructionist Congress which the people have voted out and of which Governor Dewey has proved to be the unfair victim.

The popular vote reveals an upsurge of the progressive Democratic forces and places us now in a position of sympathy and strength in relation to the governments and liberal trends in Europe. This will prove of real value in creating greater international understanding and in strengthening democratic forces abroad and is a sore blow to the Communists. They cannot possibly accuse us now of being reactionary, for the voice of the people in the most powerful democracy has vindicated our way of life and the common man has spoken in no uncertain terms.

MARIAN AYMAR JOHNSON.
Washington.

The people, you say, have spoken. May I suggest that you amend that to say, "the plain people have spoken." They have spoken out, it seems to me, against streamlined and inhuman efficiency, against high-pressure advertising, against "expert opinions" and "reliable sources" and "inside information." And in thus speaking out they have vindicated Abraham Lincoln's faith in them.

SIDNEY A. FINE.
Falls Church, Va.

Those of us who went to the polls—rather than to the pollsters—last Tuesday and voted the President back into office had the civil rights issue in mind. We placed that issue on an equal footing with reinstituted price and rent controls, the extension of social security benefits, an all-out housing program, Federal aid to education, extended rural electrification and natural resources conservation programs, full United States support of the United Nations, and a sound foreign policy. Yes, we voted for civil rights as a high-priority, gilt-edge, gold-star "must" for our Nation's Capital.

DUTTON FERGUSON.
New York.

Practically complete election returns from California, Illinois and Ohio indicate the total vote in those three States was 10,760,000, but the President's plurality over Governor Dewey was only 100,000. This means that a shift of only 50,000 votes—less than one-half of 1 per cent of the total vote cast in the three States—would have shifted 78 electoral votes into the Republican column, giving the Governor a total of 267, 1 more than necessary for election.

This should serve as another nail in the coffin of the electoral college, an institution which may yet create havoc in our political life.

EDGAR BEIGEL.
Washington.

Editors and commentators are being remarkably slow and grudging about recognizing Mr. Harold Ickes' contribution to Mr. Truman's victory.

The race was so close in most sections that Mr. Ickes' forceful warning of a probable raid on the national reserves by private interests and Mr. Dewey's failure to reassure the public may well have been the deciding factors.

BENJAMIN KIRSON.
Holicong, Pa.

We understand according to the radio news commentators that you all have about 1500 people in and around the White House that are fixing to be out of a job in your city. We wondered if you would be so kind as to run a small release in your newspaper that the United States Army and Air Force Recruiting Office at 233 Cedar Street in Abilene, Tex., has some mighty fine jobs to offer and doesn't show any preference between Democrats and Republicans.

WAYNE HALL.
Abilene, Tex.

Walter Lippmann convinced me in his column of November 4 that it was the more than three years dead Franklin Delano Roosevelt who won the Truman election. Mr. Lippmann's sublime journalistic sincerity was then bulwarked by his emphasis that in saying so he did not detract from Mr. Truman's remarkable personal performance. That's the one-phrase-suck-the-blood-out-of-the-other-phrase technique.

I, too, am impressed with pundits who stick their faces up to the back of the neck in encyclopedias and then awe me with their genius. But right now I am terribly fed up. The psychological pall that the Ropers and the Gallups with their pseudo-scientific polls held like a depressing cloud over the imaginations of the American people is now lifted and we are, thank God, freed from that sick witchcraft.

W. A. C.

I rise to the defense of Messrs. Gallup and Roper. Their public opinion sampling polls are just as valid today as they ever were as long as Messrs. Gallup and Roper reported facts and did not try to forecast the future.

C. DOUGLAS SAGER.

The writer can understand how it might be possible for about 100 per cent of the comparatively few newspaper publishers to desire a Republican victory, but isn't it strange that almost 100 per cent of the hundreds of editorial writers, political reporters and columnists should reflect these desires of their employers in their writings? Could it be that the writers for our "free press" are not free? Could it be that these writers are just like us ordinary working stiffs—we try to please our bosses, too? Is it possible for all of the working press to be so far divorced from reality as not to be aware of the political feeling and temper of a majority of the American public? Could it be that while the American public enjoys a free press, it is not a representative press?

GEORGE SORKIN.
Washington.

It is a simple case of cause and effect. Americans have not forgotten the Harding and Hoover Administrations. Besides, President Truman fought for equal human rights and privileges.

The rank and file of the American people are now an enlightened people, thanks to the daily papers, better education, rural electrification and radio. Their standard of intelligence is higher than after World War I, but it seems some politicians have not realized it.

Congressmen must now be statesmen and not politicians if they want to remain long at this Nation's helm. The day is past when Congressmen can hide their deeds or beat them from the memory of their constituents. Neither can the Southern conservatives hide behind a "States' right" facade. It was equal civil liberties they were fighting. There would have been some howl from the people if the several Governors had not taken up the issue for political reasons. I would not like to be in their shoes when future historians have their say.

MRS. EDITH D. ROGERS.
Tallahassee, Fla.

The sorry plight of the Nation's poll-takers provides the complete answer to the advertisers, researchers and all others who have so emphatically maintained that the American housewife likes soap operas. For the past several years, evidence of widespread dissatisfaction with these programs has been supposedly refuted by "scientific" polls and poll-taking devices. The poll-takers have asked us to believe that the American housewife has an infantile mind, interested only in romantic identifications with radio heroines.

Similarly, in the recent campaign the pollsters asked us to believe that the American people would return a Congress whose record was a complete denial of their interests and elect a President who refused to repudiate that Congress. In the latter case, the people through their ballot said what was obvious all the time, that practically no one votes against his own interest. The now discredited practice of poll taking should permit the planners and sponsors of daytime radio entertainment to recognize the obvious fact that American women are intelligent, mature and critical in their judgment.

MARGARET H. McDOWELL.
McLean, Va.

It was in your pages I saw the statistics issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The part I remember is that approximately 50 per cent of the people live on $3000 a year or less. This includes me. Now with one growing boy on my hands these past years and less than $3000 a year, the two most important things in my life are food and shelter.

Does anyone labor under the impression that we were all suddenly suitably housed when we started out to vote Tuesday? Food was handed back to private enterprise to handle two years ago. So far it has regarded their responsibility to make a fortune at the expense of the American people as of the first importance.

What Mr. Truman has and holds out to us is the common touch. We feel we are not blocs, coalitions, vague taxpayers, strange, uncouth characters to him, but the people.

Objective Foreign Policy Threatened

A POLICY of resistance to further Soviet expansion has received bipartisan support. The European Recovery Program, and the assistance given Greece and Turkey are among its major results. Its bipartisan backing has made it possible for this Government to take a firm stand in Berlin and to endorse a military alliance of the Western democracies.

But the presidential campaign showed that there was no bipartisan support for other important features of our foreign policy.

Governor Dewey opposed the Administration on Palestine and the Italian colonies. He called for a policy that would "prod" western Europe into a union. He urged the needs for closer inter-American cooperation and more effective aid to the Chinese government.

It can hardly be denied that the Administration is open to just criticism for the way in which it has dealt with these vitally significant issues. In other cases, such as that of Spain, it has placed expediency above principle and has underestimated the worth of our fellow democracies' confidence in American good faith and dependability. By its repeated disregard for the United Nations it has impeded the growth of the agency to which it so often renders lipservice.

Such dangerous errors as these are in no small part due to the growing extent of the National Security Council's control over foreign policy.

OUR CONTEST with the Soviet Union makes the coordination of foreign policy with defense policy imperative. But so long as the principles, the objectives, and the implementation of our foreign policy are decided for us by the officials who are responsible for the national defense, and who speak for the armed services, American foreign policy will be negative rather than positive, and founded upon the theory that force is the only effective instrument of policy.

The President's constitutional authority in the field of foreign relations is exceedingly broad. The powers of the Secretary of State, on the contrary, are limited by the organic statute of 1789 to those delegated to him by the President. In their conduct of foreign policy many Presidents have used agencies outside of the State Department. The number of official activities which affect our foreign relations has become so great that this is now inevitable. Yet, until last year, within the executive branch of the Government, the Secretary of State had the final say in deciding what our foreign policy should be. In 1947 his powers were for the first time effectively reduced by the act which created the National Security Council.

The act states that it is the function of the council "to advise the President with respect to the integration of domestic, foreign and military policies relating to the national security." Since the permanent members of the council, under the chairmanship of the President, are the Secretaries of State, Defense, Army, Navy and Air Force and the chairman of the National Security Resources Board, it is obvious, as I have already pointed out, that when, as at present, the Secretary of State is a professional soldier, and when, as at present, the President automatically approves the council's recommendations, the point of view of the armed services will prevail in the determination of foreign policy.

IN THE PAST the heads of the other executive departments had the opportunity at Cabinet meetings to advise the President upon pending foreign-policy decisions. As officials in intimate touch with the Nation's internal life—with labor, agriculture and industry—they exercised an eminently civilian influence. This influence is now replaced by that of a group of officials who express the views of the military professionals, and of whom only two are of Cabinet status.

The mere substitution by the President of new policies for discredited policies, as he begins his new term in office, will not repair the damage already done. Far graver harm will only be prevented if the President restricts the National Security Council to its proper coordinating functions, and restores to the Secretary of State his rightful and traditional authority to determine, and to supervise the conduct of, the foreign policy of the United States.

An objective observer can no longer doubt the accuracy of Winston Churchill's declaration at Fulton, Mo., that the present rulers of Russia respect only force. No American foreign policy could succeed under these conditions unless it were known to be backed by the military and industrial strength that the times demand.

But an American foreign policy which holds that the military containment of Russia is its only objective; which permits temporary expediency to jeopardize the ultimate achievement of a successful United Nations; which values strategic bases more than peace settlements based on justice and respect for the rights of others, and which refuses to concede that our safety can be better guaranteed by collective security than by the effort of the United States to run the world single-handed, is a policy which is also foredoomed to failure.

Cuban President Will Visit Truman

Havana, Cuba, Nov. 8 (AP).—President Carlos Prio Socarras announced today he intends to visit President Truman in Washington at the end of this month, or early in December.

He said details for the trip would be completed later. Prio denied a report carried by the newspaper Crisol that he might go to Key West to greet President Truman, who is vacationing there.

Senate Body's Action Removes Likelihood of Seating Battle

Preelection forecasts of Senators "barred at the door" in hot inter-party contests over Senate seating passed quietly into limbo last night.

A GOP-controlled Senate Rules Subcommittee, investigating election "irregularities" in preparation for the scramble, simply voted to turn all of its data over to its Democratic successor.

Said Senator William E. Jenner (R., Ind.), chairman of the group:

"Inasmuch as a new subcommittee will replace the present committee personnel, we feel it would be useless to expend public money in preliminary work when there is every possibility our activities would be of no avail."

Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.), who probably will succeed Jenner as chairman when the Democrats take over, promised careful scrutiny of all the committee's reports and "no whitewashing" of evidence involving Democratic Senators, but said he saw no reason why all Senators-elect should not take their seats at the start of the new session.

As a precedent, Myers pointed to the seating last session of Senator Harley M. Kilgore (D., W. Va.), whose 1946 election is still under investigation by the committee.

Alleged irregularities in the election of two new Democratic Senators—Representative Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas and former Gov. Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma—were involved in the GOP-controlled committee's current investigation.

On the eve of the election Democratic Senators charged the investigations were "partisan," and threatened to counter with some investigations of their own involving Republican Senate candidates.

Myers last night, however, intimated that he had no plans at present to look into Senate elections in any States beyond the three covered by the current inquiry—Texas, Oklahoma and West Virginia.

Truman Set For Projects' Restoration

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

During his short visit here before leaving for his Key West vacation, President Truman started action to restore a number of Government projects knocked out or seriously hamstrung by the last Congress.

The President reportedly made plain to cabinet members that he considers restoration of those projects as commitments he made during the campaign, and that he intends vigorously to fight for them.

Conferences already have started between the Bureau of the Budget and several departments on the presidential program. Among these are plans for a deficiency appropriation for the Interior Department, which will include riders wiping out restrictions placed on Interior Department projects in the appropriation bills passed last June.

Would Force Retireemnts

Among these are:

1. A provision put in the House appropriations bill by Committee Chairman John Taber (R., N. Y.) that certain reclamation officials must be engineers. This provision, which Mr. Truman called an "invasion of executive powers," would force Reclamation Commissioner Mike Straus and Regional Director Richard L. Boke of California from their jobs February 1. In 1923 another Republican Congress in the Harding Administration fired the then Reclamation Chairman A. P. Davis because he was an engineer. It declared that the job called for a "business man." Davis, like Straus and Boke, was what is known as a "public power man."

2. Another Taber provision limiting the amount of money that could be spent for salaries in the Reclamation Bureau to 48 million dollars. The appropriation was slashed to that figure, according to a high Interior Department official, "arbitrarily" from 58 million, and resulted in breaking down the engineering staff that had been "slowly recruited since the war." It already has caused layoffs for about 3500 in the bureau.

Like Car Without Engine

3. Another provision in the appropriation for the Canyon Ferry Dam in Montana barred the use of any of the funds for power facilities—a provision referred to by Interior Secretary Krug as "building an automobile without an engine."

4. Restrictions on Government building of transmission lines to distribute power from the Central Valley project in California—the project under direction of Boke.

5. A similar limitation on transmission facilities at the Fort Peck Dam on the Missouri near the Montana-South Dakota border.

6. Flat prohibition against use of any of the funds voted for so-called "account work"—work by Government employes instead of under contract. These projects are usually "connecting jobs," such as joining a dam built under private contract with an irrigation system.

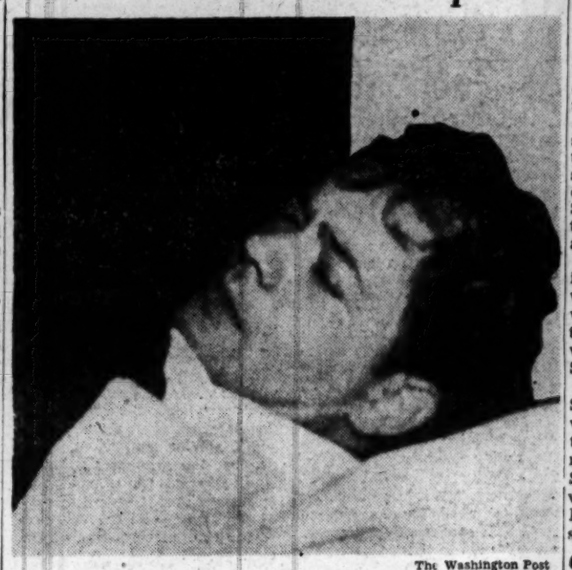
Fund Slash at Denver

7. A provision limiting the Chief Reclamation Engineering Office at Denver to $17,800,000, and another arbitrarily cutting the funds for personnel work from one million to $750,000.

8. Another provision limiting the amount to be spent on information work on reclamation projects. This, according to the reclamation officials, handicapped several projects, by restricting technical advice and information to ranchers and others as to what benefits they could derive from the projects.

Party leaders attributed much of the support of President Truman in the West to resentment by small farmers to the limitations imposed by the Eightieth Congress on such public works.

Beaten Victim of Hold-Up Man



The Washington Post

IN AMBULANCE—Robert Garsh, manager of the Giant Food Store at 10th and U sts. nw., who was beaten yesterday when a robber rifled the store safe

Bandit Robs Giant Store

Garsh unlocked the door, the bandit pushed his way in. His hand was in the right pocket of his topcoat, Garsh said, as though holding a gun.

The holdup man ordered the manager to "get back in the office," and directed him to open a floor safe which was hidden under boards.

With the bandit prodding him in the back, Garsh dialed the safe open and handed the man the receipts, all bills. He aslo took out a money sack filled with change, he told police, but the man said, "put it back."

After pulling a brown paper sack out of his pocket and stuffing the bills in it, the holdup man slugged Garsh below his left eye with his fist, knocking him out, police were told.

The manager, taken to police headquarters to examine pictures of suspects, told officers he would recognize the bandit if he saw him again.

He said the man, a light-skinned Negro, had on a brown hat pulled down over his eyes, and a brown topcoat. He was wearing dark glasses and had a large white bandage over his left eye, and extending over the side of his face. His jaw was puffed out, Garsin told police, as if he had something in it.

He described the holdup man as about 25 years old, five feet six inches tall, and weighing about 135 pounds.

Some 15 persons were shopping in the store at the time of the robbery, according to Glenn Connor, 27, the grocery manager, who entered Garsh's office after the robbery and found the manager on the floor. He called police and the store's main office, he said.

The loss was fully covered by insurance, an official of Giant Food Stores said. The bandit, who police believed may not have been armed, is believed to have escaped north on 10th st.

press conference he called himself.

He was much less communicative about his own plans. Although colleagues predicted he will be overwhelmingly returned to his former post of House minority leader, Martin declined even to throw his hat in the ring.

"I am not asking for it and I am not running away from it," he said.

A reporter asked if he would agree to serve if elected.

"It depends on the conditions," he said. He declined to elaborate beyond saying that he had not had time to consult Republican colleagues, and would defer any decisions until then.

Then he gave his party a "Dutch Uncle" talk about needing "new blood and new brains." He said it would be a good idea, too, for it to "get a little closer to the people." He said this was particularly true in his home State of Massachusetts, but there is need for "new blood" on a national scale.

The GOP speaker—recently commended by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for "doing more than any other one man" to hold his party together during the lean GOP years of the New Deal—gave Harry Truman all the credit for his own election.

He said Truman made a "very favorable impression" in Martin's own Fourteenth Massachusetts District.

"I really think Harry Truman won his own election by the kind of campaign he made," he said. "He was out there fighting all the time. I think he made gains in the last two weeks."

He envisioned "some kind of reorganization" within the Republican Party, but said it was too early to specify.

"After you get beat in an election you have to talk things over and formulate your program," he said.

The 64-year-old bachelor, whose out-of-Congress hobby is publishing the North Attleboro Evening Chronicle, said he was "fooled" by the election along with the experts and the pollsters.

He said Republicans might have conducted a different kind of campaign if it hadn't been for the unanimity among the pollsters. Overconfidence, union labor acvity for the Democrats, and fear that a change of administrations might hasten a depression also contributed to the GOP defeat, in Martin's book.

He told newsmen Governor Dewey conducted the right kind of campaign for a party that's "ahead." Just as in football, he said it's good policy "to coast" in politics when you are really leading.

Martin's statement that the President can "get anything he really wants" from the next Congress if he wants it bad enough, was the first official intimation that Republicans aren't counting too heavily on their old coalition with Southern Democrats.

One highly-placed Republican confided that even in the heyday of the coalition, the GOP never counted on more than 40 Southern votes. In the first few months of the new Truman Administration, as in the early days of the New Deal, the hard Southern core will "wilt." Even with the old coalition in full vigor, a 90-man Democratic edge would be hard to lick.

In predicting that the President could even pass his civil rights program, Martin stressed that he was speaking only for the House. In the past, a Senate Southern filibuster has always blocked House-approved civil rights measures.

Mrs. Roosevelt Urges Ouster

and conservatives. And it would be much more logical if our political parties were divided along these lines.

"The Democratic Party has seemed to me to be predominantly the party of liberalism, although sometimes, through the curious evolution of politics, it embraced Southerners who number among their ranks some of the most reactionary men in public life.

"Similarly, the Republican Party is traditionally the party of conservatism, although it embraces some very fine liberals. Now, for the first time in history, the Democrats have won an election without the Solid South.

"Some of the more reactionary Southerners have chosen to break with the Democratic Party, and I think it would be a good idea to make the break final. Possibly the Southern conservatives would be welcomed into the Republican Party with whom they have voted so often in recent years."

Call for Ouster Stirs Post-Election Calm

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt's call for eviction of States Rights Party bolters from House and Senate chairmanships yesterday ruffled the Capitol's post-election calm.

But it failed to upset for the time being the Administration's "no punishment" rule.

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath said simply that it was a matter for House and Senate Democrats to decide in their organization caucuses.

He said he had not discussed with the President what the policy should be and in no event will the National Committee interfere.

Speaking strictly for himself, McGrath told newsmen:

"I take the attitude that we can still reward our friends without resorting to reprisals against our enemies. My desire is to bring about as much unity as possible within the Democratic Party.

"I have no desire to curry favor with the fringe element who were never for us. I recognize that many people were led by their emotions. But there are a few men in whose integrity I can never have any further confidence."

Mrs. Roosevelt specifically named Representative John Rankin (D., Miss.) and Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) as "among those who will lose committee chairmanships if they are not considered Democrats."

Johnston is in seniority line for either the Senate District Committee or the Senate Postoffice and Civil Service Committee, and recently indicated he will request the latter.

The South Carolina Democrat fought Truman's nomination at the Philadelphia convention but announced in an eleventh-hour campaign statement that he was voting for Truman and Barkley. A spokesman for the Democratic National Committee said Mrs. Roosevelt must have been misinformed about Johnston's part in the campaign.

Rankin is in seniority line for chairman of two important House Committees—Veterans Affairs and Un-American Activities.

One informant said the only other known Thurmond supporter who normally would succeed to a House chairmanship is Representative William M. Whittington (Miss.), ranking Democrat on the House Public Works Committee.

14 Are Indicted Here In Numbers Cases

Fourteen persons were indicted yesterday by the District grand jury as numbers writers and betting pickup men.

The cases disclosed that numbers-lottery operators are using women to pick up numbers slips and money collected by the writers. Indicted were:

Dorothy S. Sutton, 22, of 926 4th st. ne., charged with operation of a lotttery and possession of numbers slips. She said she took her receipts over the District line to Hyattsville, where they were collected by a superior whose name was not revealed, according to police.

Rita F. Palmer, 23, of 1451 58th ave., Chapel Oaks, Md., charged with picking up numbers slips near 1333 Maryland ave. ne., where Jerome G. Donaldson was charged with operation and possession.

Samuel J. Battista, 29, of 1404 Woodside Parkway, Silver Spring, Md., charged with lottery operation, and who police said was pickup man for Michael J. Estep, 46, of 77 Hawaii ave. ne., who was indicted as a numbers writer.

John H. Chaffin, jr., 32, janitor's quarters of 1436 Meridian pl. nw., charged as a numbers writer.

Charles Davis, 56, of 353 G st. sw., charged with writing numbers on a lot near 229 4th st. sw.

Nathaniel L. Drummond, 40, of 636 Columbia rd. nw., charged with writing numbers at 3106 Georgia ave. nw.

Leroy Cheek, 40, indicted as a numbers writer, residing at 1830 I st. nw.

Alleged numbers writers Calvin C. Donelson, 22, of 949 Eastern ave. ne., and John A. Brown, 32, of 1220 C st. se., were indicted.

Percy M. Jones, 43, 70 T st. nw., charged with numbers writing.

Frank E. O'Neill, 44, of 914 10th st. se., charged with writing numbers at 1364 E st. se.

Phillip Goodwine, 38, of 1103 9th st. nw., charged with writing numbers.

The grand jury, in another case, charged Mrs. Lucille G. Johnson, 27, of 1827 12th st. nw., with performing an abortion on a 24-year-old unmarried woman. The alleged victim said that Mrs. Johnson claimed to be a nurse and took $75 for the job.

perform their duties, they "can do much toward keeping the county clean."

About 40 Cases Ready

State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson said that approximately 40 cases are ready for presentation to the grand jury. Thirteen persons were arrested Saturday in a series of raids upon small-time gamblers in the county. The judge did not mention these raids in his talk.

Meanwhile, in Baltimore, word of the welching got around to school officials.

The State's attorney and city police got investigators out. On the basis of what they found, State's Attorney J. Bernard Wells said a grand jury investigation will start "within the next day or two."

Arthur E. Hungerford, executive secretary of one high school alumni association, charged threats were being made to keep the boys "from talking." He said they were threatened with the "Greek cross"—a knife cut on the cheek.

The student agents for the pools, which pay varying odds for guessing a certain number of winners from a list of weekly football games, were reported to get 25 per cent of their sales as commissions.

In Hagerstown, Circuit Judge Mish instructed the jury to investigate particularly bookmaking and the "numbers racket." He also told it to look into the employment of prisoners on outside private work.

On gambling, Judge Mish said: "In the final analysis the breaking up of such rackets rests on the law enforcement officers and I serve notice now that if they continue to neglect to seek the necessary evidence to prosecute I will be compelled to seek Federal or State assistance."

The instructions to the jury came in the wake of appointment by the Hagerstown Junior Chamber of Commerce of a committee to investigate crime.

Sheriff Was Accused

Judge Mish's reference to outside work by prisoners also recalled charges of a similar nature in September against Sheriff Joseph D. Baker.

County Commissioner Winslow F. Burhams moved that the board ask for Baker's resignation. The motion was withdrawn when no second was received.

Burhams had offered affidavits of six former prisoners who said they worked on contracting jobs for the sheriff's son, Donald Baker, and on other outside jobs.

Washington County State's Attorney Martin Ingram also reported that Judge Mish had advised the sheriff earlier that use of prisoners outside the jail was illegal. Baker acknowledged this and said there had been no recurrence after the judge contacted him.

Judge Mish instructed the jury to investigate the work by prisoners "thoroughly and take such action as it may warrant."

It was not known whether the President would accept.

Video Puts Clothes On French Cuties

London, Nov. 8 (AP).—The British Broadcasting Co., ruled tonight that those French cuties have got to wear some clothes before they can be televised.

BBC said it is going to televise the Paris show "Libo Cabaret" Tuesday. The show is billed as "one of the most brilliant and daring in Paris." A BBC spokesman commented:

"It was decided that the chorus girls were a little too naked for television over family sets. So the producers said the girls' nudity would be covered."

One on the Aisle—

'Baltimore Plan' Runs Up Mileage

By Richard L. Coe

NOW HERE'S A THING: In London, Paris, Rome, Athens, Cairo, Ankara, Bucharest, Stockholm, Oslo AND Moscow, when you want to go to the theater, you go downtown and go to the theater. But not in Washington. Oh, my, no.

In this progressive New World of ours you go downtown. But for an 8:30 curtain you get downtown by 7 o'clock. There you catch a bus at the Veterans Information Center (in front of the old District Building). And on the bus you sit and sit for a 40-mile drive. Then you get out of the bus and see your play. And after it's over you clamber aboard the bus and drive back to the heart of this Nation's Capital, from which point you struggle home just as though you'd seen the play downtown.

Such, at least, is what's going to happen come the week of December 6, when the Theater Guild will put its Baltimore plan into operation for what Washington subscribers it has left. On matinee days (Wednesdays and Saturdays), the bus will leave the Vet. Info. Ctr. at 1 p. m.

During the week of December 6, the Guild will be offering the first in its series of five Baltimore plays. This is John Van Druten's new comedy, "Make Way for Lucia," which will star Isabel Jeans and Cyrill Ritchard. Whether Van Druten will turn up another "Old Acquaintance" or "Voice of the Turtle" remains to be seen. Miss Jeans, a London high comedy favorite, hasn't acted here since "The Man in Possession" in 1930, but Ritchard you'll recall from Gielgud's "Love for Love" at the National when he did a superb job with Tattle.

New Barry Play

The Guild's four other Baltimore offerings are half set. One will be the new Phillip Barry play, "The Emperor of China," with Pierre Aumont and Lilli Palmer, both of the films, heading the cast. Certain, too, is last season's Rodgers - Hammerstein musical, "Allegro."

Further information on the Guild's Baltimore schedule can be obtained from Bess Davis Schreiner, who's in the offices on the National Theater mezzanine Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays from 1 p. m.

This business of going to the segregated Ford's Theater, Baltimore, raises, to be sure, much searching of mind. I've been troubled by it and, from your phone calls and letters, I find you have, too. The point should be made that whereas the Baltimore theater has segregation, ours practiced complete discrimination. While it was on that total discrimination basis that Actors Equity and the Dramatists Guild issued their refusal to play, both dicta refer to "segregation in the Nation's Capital."

I still feel that the Guild has not been as forthright as it should have been. When the crisis began two years ago, Codirector Lawrence Langner came out in accord with the aim of assuring all Americans in this city the right to enjoy the living theater. But in the 18 months which followed he did nothing to resolve the inevitable situation in which his 14,000 subscribers now find themselves. And when the threat of no theater in Washington became a reality he evolved this makeshift plan of 80 miles for a seat. Commercially it's probably smart; ethically, I think it's open to question.

Overnight Could Do It

So, like you, I've been disturbed over what to do and to those of you who come to me for advice I can only outline the matter as I have here. I will be going over from time to time because many of Ford's productions this year will be news and because I intend to keep reminding you from time to time that although this Capital has no living professional theater, it does exist elsewhere.

But it's still a heck of a note and might never have arisen if Marcus Heiman had at least tried, if only for a limited time, a practice which at most would have affected only a small group of people. If ever a man had a chance to show bigness of heart and spirit, Mr. Heiman had that chance and still has it, for the National at any time can be turned back overnight to its rightful role.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

WHEN LEO DUROCHER attempted to justify his tough-guy tactics with the observation "nice guys don't win pennants," he might have added nice guys don't keep managerial jobs, either. Since the American League season ended, the rugs have been pulled out from under three of the nicer personalities among the managers—Ted Lyons, Bucky Harris and Steve O'Neill. And it was Durocher himself who replaced sweet-tempered Mel Ott as manager of the Giants last Summer.

POVICH

Nice guys aren't always fired, though. They can be fairly secure in their jobs, like Manager Connie Mack, if he happens to be president of the ball club he manages, like Mr. Mack it. And it helps if you win the pennant, like Nice Guy Lou Boudreau. But otherwise nice guys can't afford to tangle with the front office, like Bucky Harris did, or finish last like Lyons did, or drop out of the first division if you're managing Detroit, as O'Neill did.

Harris' chief mistake was in getting himself hired by Larry MacPhail and then finding himself marooned as a MacPhail man in an organization in which MacPhail's name was non grata the following year. His 1948 Yankee team lost the pennant only in the last 48 hours of the season, but Harris apparently lost his job in mid-Summer when he spoke kindly of MacPhail and took a dim view of General Manager George Weiss' failure to get him more pitching help.

JOE KUHEL, as manager of the seventh-place Washington club, has more security than most first-division managers. For finishing fifth with a fifth-place team, O'Neill was sacked in Detroit. For finishing seventh with the seventh-place Nats, Kuhel was re-hired. Kuhel happened to be working for a club owner who knew the limits of his ball club. Clark Griffith can rationalize. He could have told Auto Body Man Walter Briggs, who owns Detroit, that O'Neill had no more than a fifth-place team.

For four years in a row, O'Neill had the Tigers either first or second in the American League before dropping to fifth last season, a better record than any other manager in the league over the same span, but he was fired. It seems he was no flaming personality, like Durocher. Apparently the most to be said for O'Neill was that he was a good manager and a fine person, affectionately liked by everybody.

Only once did O'Neill blow his top. That was the day when he was managing the Indians some years back. He was infuriated at Carl Fischer, a Washington pitcher, who called him names in pregame practice, and strode into the Nats' dressing room to challenge Fischer. Ordinarily, an opposing manager bent on starting a fight in the enemy's dressing room, would be mobbed. The Nats' knew O'Neill, liked him, and made way for him. He dared Fischer to get off the rubbing table, and was content when the pitcher ducked the challenge.

NOW IT'S BEING bruited that Harris may be the successor to O'Neill at Detroit. It isn't the job Harris was offered two years ago when the Tigers sought him as their general manager. To Harris it was the chance to fulfill an ambition—to get out of that baseball "monkey suit" and move upstairs to the dignity of the front office—but he stayed with the Yankees as field manager out of loyalty to MacPhail.

He's out of work now, and he would take the Detroit managerial job, but there is no certainty that he will even be offered it. Much depends on the state of relations between young Walter O. (Spike) Briggs, jr., who is vice president of the club, and his father, who is the boss.

Harris is young Briggs' nominee for the Detroit job, and it was Spike Briggs who originally paved the way for Harris to become the general manager two years ago. But from week to week, young Briggs doesn't know how much of a voice he has in Tiger affairs. His dad runs hot and cold with Spike. Sometimes Spike is a big shot in the organization, sometimes Papa Briggs shoos him back to the factory with instructions to tend to the body building business and stay out of the baseball affairs.

ANOTHER NAME mentioned as O'Neill's successor is that of Paul Richards, the old catcher, who is now doubling as manager and general manager of the Tigers' Buffalo farm. Richards has qualifications as a manager, having won pennants with Atlanta before moving back to the big leagues to catch for the Tigers.

It's a coincidence that both of the supposedly leading candidates, Harris and Richards, were managers at Buffalo and later general managers of the same club where they gained front-office experience. That fact may be militating against both of them and neither might get the Detroit job, if the choice lies with Billy Evans, the Tigers' general manager.

Evans' contract as the boss at Detroit has only one year to run and he may take a dim view of having a successor as general manager at his elbow. He might interpret his own job as being more secure if the Tigers had a manager without the front-office experience of Harris and Richards. A nice, gruff, tobacco-chewing ex-player without too many social graces or a head for figures, perhaps.

Everything's Secret as Terps, Tar Heels Drill for Big Game

Both Camps Are Placed 'Off Limits'

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Behind locked gates on practice fields 275 miles apart, Maryland and North Carolina started work yesterday for the football game which will bring them together Saturday at Griffith Stadium.

The gridiron encampments of the rivals were "off-limits" to everyone except players and coaches. This high state of secrecy will prevail until Friday when the public will be permitted to view the final drills—calisthenics.

Down in Chapel Hill, N. C., Coach Carl Snavely told his Tar Heels to forget, if they could, the tie with William and Mary Saturday, the only blot on an otherwise perfect football record.

"We Were Lucky"

"We were lucky to get out of that game with a tie," he said. "I hope you got all of the bad football out of your system against William and Mary. You'll have to be at your best, as good as you were against Texas, to beat Maryland Saturday. They haven't played the schedule we have, but they're capable of beating you."

At College Park, former Tar Heel Tackle Jim Tatum devoted the first 20 minutes of his Monday practice telling his squad how important it was for them to beat his alma mater.

"North Carolina has one of the best squads in the country," he said. "Potentially, they are a great football team with one of the greatest backs in the country in Charlie Justice. You can't make mistakes against them.

"Victory Is a Must"

"We've won six games against mediocre opposition and lost one to a team—Duke—which has been defeated the last two Saturdays. This doesn't help our reputation. If you really want to regard yourself as a topflight team, a victory over Carolina is a must. If you play the game you're capable of playing, you can win."

Tatum then paired off his squad and ordered a one-hour tackling practice.

"November is hardly the time of the year to practice fundamentals," he said, "but our tackling was so sloppy against South Carolina Saturday that we need the practice."

Last night the Terrapin coaches huddled for six hours. First, they watched pictures of last year's Carolina game, which the Tar Heels won, 19-0. Then they started mapping the defenses which they hope will thwart the bull-like thrusts of Fullback Hosea Rodgers, the wide runs of Charlie Justice and the passing of both Justice and Rodgers.

IN SHORT—End Fran Evans, who suffered a crushed cheekbone in the GW game, rejoined the squad yesterday, wearing a grotesque-looking mask which Trainer Duke Wyre devised for him . . . North Carolina, considered almost a shoo-in for the Sugar Bowl IF they survive Maryland, Duke and Virginia, is also in demand for the Cotton Bowl. So much, in fact, that a Dallas newspaper will cover Saturday's game . . . Over 5300 tickets for the game have been sold to North Carolina fans . . .

Portmaker Loses Lead in Garden Show

By Austin Bealmear

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—Adventure recaptured the lead from Portmaker in the red-hot scrap for the Open Hunter championship at the National Horse Show today with his fifth blue ribbon performance at Madison Square Garden.

Given a perfect ride by Ellie Wood Keith, the 4-year-old gelding from Mrs. E. Cooper Person's Llangollen Farms at Upperville, Va., was a popular choice over 29 other green or qualified hunters in this afternoon's final event.

Portmaker, who won the open jumper title in 1946 for Dr. and Mrs. Alvin I. Kay of Bethesda, Md., and took reserve honors last year, went into the event as the leader in the tight battle for the championship but failed to score a point.

Half Point Lead

The two and a half points earned by Adventure sent him to the front for the second time in the show with 15 points, only half a point ahead of Portmaker. Three of the 14 events figuring in the championship remain to be completed tomorrow, leaving the title within the grasp of nearly every horse competing.

Second place in today's event went to Her Time, shown by August A. Busch, jr., of Afton, Mo., while Icecapade, owned and ridden by Mrs. Page Jennings of Charlottesville, Va., placed third. Miss Keith also rode Safety Call, a stablemate of Adventure, to the fourth place ribbon for the Llangollen establishment.

Closest to Adventure and Portmaker at the end of seven days of competition were Bright Light of

Center Tal Dredge Keeps GW Rolling With His 'Git-Fiddle'

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

CENTER Talbot Dredge scared the dickens out of his George Washington U. teammates last Saturday.

He came off the field wringing his fingers in pain, and for a moment the boys feared Tal would not be able to play the guitar on the train bac kto Washington. But he was the life of the party.

On the GW club, Tal's guitar-plucking fingers are almost as important as his Saturday gridiron play. For during the week as well as Saturday, he is the center of the GW team.

In the varsity house and on game trips, the gang gathers around the former Shelley (Idaho) cowpoke and urges, "Come on, Cowboy, unpack the 'git-fiddle,' and play something."

And the leathery-faced fellow with the shy, infectious grin, obliges with "Way Out There," "Oh, Leon," "Darktown Strutters' Ball," or any one of over 150 numbers in his repertoire.

He's good, too. The tipoff comes from Ol' Bo Rowland, head coach and the sternest of critics, who says simply, "I've heard worse."

Line Coach and Custodian of Discipline Bo Sherman chimes in with "it beats having the fellows chewing each other's head off in poker games."

Dredge is one of Sherman's pet subjects. "That boy is a coach's dream," extolls Bo 2d. "He's always in shape, and as conscientious as any boy I've ever worked with.

"Tal was second string guard last year," Sherman says. "This year, with a shortage of centers, I moved him over, hoping he'd make us a good reserve at the snap back.

"Well, you know, that boy worked so hard, and did so well, he's our regular center, and a good one, too," Sherman concludes.

Tal will be throwing his 200 pounds against Duke Saturday at Durham, N. C. And tonight, at 6:15, he'll be pulling strings (guitar that is) in his radio debut on Bob Wolff's WINX sports show.

Lions Play Bisons Tonight

The Buffalo Bisons, riding the crest of four game winning streak will find an angry den of Lions awaiting them tonight in Uline Arena.

The Lions, collectively, have been taking a slow burn ever since the Bisons lambasted them, 10-0, on Buffalo ice a week ago. There'll be some rough playing tonight as the Lions try to regain some of their self-respect.

Coach Frank Beisler especially wants a victory over the Bisons whom he led to an American Hockey League title in 1946. He knows the Lions can do it—Buffalo is one of the two teams the Lions have whipped this year—and has been driving the boys hard in pregame practice sessions.

Army Invited to Play California, Paper Says

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Daily Mirror said tonight it had learned that Army had been invited to play California in a post-season charity football game.

Both teams are unbeaten and untied. California is the current favorite for the host spot in the Rose Bowl January 1.

. . . So the Referee Blew the Whistle

By Stan Opotowsky

NEW YORK, Nov. 8. (AP).—The whistle tooted, and the Los Angeles Dons kicked off to open their game with the New York Yankees.

As the ball soared through the air and the two teams converged to do battle, the public address system blared:

"Ladies and gentlemen, our National Anthem."

The band broke into the arresting strains of "The Star-Spangled Banner." The players stopped dead in their tracks and stood at rapt attention, leaving the ball to bound to a stop. The Dons had to kick off again.

It was just a case of Referee Hol Slutz blowing his whistle too soon for the opening of the game. But Slutz needn't feel too unhappy about it, for referees have been getting into all kinds of trouble this season anyway.

Take the case of the ref in the high school game between Yates and Central at Houston, Tex. He'd better bone up on his rule book.

Central had the ball on its own 13-yard line. The referee charged clipping against Central. Clipping is a 15-yard penalty so, by golly he placed the ball back two yards behind the Central goal, called it a safety and Yates won, 15 to 13.

Blackwood Gets Unanimous Verdict Over Ken Stribling

Joe Blackwood, Boston middleweight, made his Washington debut an auspicious one last night as he blasted out a unanimous 10-round decision over Ken Stribling at Turner's Arena.

Only the final bell saved the local boy from a knockout. Seconds before the fight ended, Blackwood scored the only knockdown of the slam-bang affair.

He sent Stribling crashing to the canvas for a 9-count and was about to deck him again when the fight ended.

Although he didn't throw half as many punches as Stribling, Blackwood's did the most damage. He lashed out with long lefts and rights in the eighth round and staggered Stribling three times.

Blackwood, who weighed 158½ against 161 for Stribling, was easily the most impressive fighter to show here in many months.

A small crowd of 626, including Jersey Joe Walcott, saw the weekly card. The net gate was only $1,011.36.

In the six-round semi-windup, staged after the main bout, Elkins Brothers, 188, of Washington won from Joe Lindsay, 180, of New York.

In the preliminaries Rufus Berry, 176½, Washington, defeated Ben Harrison, 193, Washington, in four; Puggy Lyons, 141, Washington, won via disqualification over Bobby Suma, 143, Washington, in the third round; Walter Ham, 126½, Washington, defeated Puggy King, 124½, Washington.

Williams TKOs Garcia in 1st

Philadelphia, Nov. 8 (AP).—Ike Williams, 140, lightweight champion, let loose with a knockout blow as the bell ended the first round to score a quick non-title victory over Buddy Garcia, 136, of Galveston, Tex., at the arena tonight.

Garcia fell flat on his face and was carried to his corner. When his handlers were unable to revive him during the intermission, Referee Dave Beloff declared Williams the winner in a one-round knockout.

Skins Need 5 for 5 to Win Eastern Title

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

THE REDSKINS yesterday paused in the midst of celebrating their third straight triumph, suddenly struck by the realization that their path to the Eastern crown in the National Football League is anything but rose-strewn. . . . After beating Boston, Sunday, 23-7, the local pro gridmen have five games left to play . . . All they have to do is win all five of 'em, Most important is a win over the Eagles sectional leaders, in a Philadelphia meeting November 21. . . . Remaining on the 'Skin schedule are games with the Detroit Lions, Eagles, Chicago Bears, Los Angeles Rams and New York Giants in that order. . . . The relatively simple Eagle schedule calls for games with Boston, Washington, Pittsburgh, Boston again, and Detroit. . . . If form holds up, the Eagles will clinch the title November 28 and Washington's last two outings will be meaningless.

"I'm glad Mike Mick hit me so hard!" . . . That was the unusual reaction of Steve (OO) Bagarus, former Redskin star now making a comeback, to a fourth-period Boston play in which he caught his only pass of the day and was smashed to the ground after a 5-yard gain . . . Steve, who broke his leg more than a year ago and was told he'd never play again, gloated over the fact he was hit at the spot his leg was broken . . . "Didn't hurt at all," he boasted after bobbing up in the old Bagarus fashion . . . The handsome lad they call Buggsy, taking part in perhaps eight plays, acted mostly as a decoy . . . Once he was absolutely in the clear, but Sammy Baugh saw him an instant too late to change the direction of a toss that was supposed to go to Howard Hartley . . . Bagarus' one catch was his sixty-seventh for the Redskins in a total of 22 games.

From Detroit comes word that Bill Dudley, All-America from Virginia, may be back in the Detroit Lions' backfield when Coach "Bo" McMillin's lads invade Griffith Stadium Sunday . . . victim of a shoulder injury which has limited his service this year, Dudley will give the Lions all the running threat they need . . . Their "Switch T-Formation" has Clyde LeForce and Fred Enke, both passing aces, playing in the same backfield and switching off at quarterback . . . Jim Gillette and George Grimes, two other Virginia backfield luminaries, are with the Lions . . . Detroit has never beaten the Redskins in Washington, but last year LeForce hurled three touchdowns to pace a 38-21 margin over the 'Skins in Detroit . . . Baugh has pitched 10 touchdowns against the Lions in the teams' last four meetings.

Dan Sandifer's banged-up shoulder was the Skins' major injury against the Yanks . . . He held it a little low after the game, which prompted one wag to observe that the great L. S. U. rookie "looks a little lopsided without a ball under his arm" . . . In three years of handling Redskin punting, Dick Poillon has averaged 43.2 yards a try . . . He's also leading Washington scorers for the third straight year with 44 points . . . Hartley paces the runners with an 18-yard average but he's carried the ball only twice . . . Jim Castiglia has run 65 times for 209 yards, Sandefer went 11 times for 60, and three other Redskins are in a virtual deadlock . . . Ed Quirk, Dick Todd and Tom Farmer each have carried the ball 42 times . . . They've accounted for 155, 163, and 157 yards, respectively.

Bo Rowland Steals Show at Touchdown Again

If George Washington's football team could score as often as its head coach, Bo Rowland, the Colonials would be a powerhouse indeed.

Rowland, who's rocked audiences everywhere with his dry humor, did it again yesterday at the Touchdown Club's weekly luncheon.

Noting the absence of other area coaches who "couldn't get up to the meeting today because they have big games coming up Saturday," Bo said:

"We don't have a big game Saturday. We play one of those cigarette teams, Duke, I think, the school's called. I don't start worrying until Thursdays. It's nice to relax and enjoy myself early in the week because I don't get the chance later."

Indian Juniors Win

Anacostia's J. V. Gridders yesterday defeated McKinley Tech, 25-6, at Anacostia. Tony Malara scored twice for Anacostia.

War Trophy Sets Record in Winning $25,000 Riggs Handicap

Carson Kirk Wins Sixth Stake Race

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico Race Track, Md., Nov. 8. Jockey Carson (Call Me Sammy) Kirk, Charles Town graduate, drove back to his Silver Spring, Md., home tonight with the winner's saddle share of the $25,000 added Riggs Handicap.

It was Kirk's sixth stake success of the Maryland fall season and his most important.

Mimosa Farm's War Trophy set a track record for a mile and a half while winning the famed event under the handling of Kirk, registering time of 2:29 2/5 to send into discard the 24-year-old 2:30 3/5 mark held by Altawood. This was the fourth track record to fall at the current meeting.

Kirk booted War Trophy, a $4.80 shot, home three parts of a length ahead of Walter M. Jefford's Loyal Legion. Only two others—Mrs. E. H. Augustus' Seven League and G. R. Watkins' Cat Bridge—competed in the test won by many prominent horses, including Seabiscuit and Stymie, since its inauguration in 1926.

Loyal Legion Favored

The event marked the return of the big handicap to the distance of a mile and a half for the first time since the 1933 running won by Pomposity.

War Trophy was second choice to Loyal Legion in the betting. When Mrs. Helen K. Haggerty's Rampart, Christiana Stables' Service Pilot and W. Arnold Hanger's Rialto were scratched, reducing the field to four, the management announced wagering would be confined to the win position.

A crowd of 12,000 watched the interesting battle. Seven League went to the front at the break followed by Loyal Legion and War Trophy with Cat Bridge trailing, a position he never bettered during the running.

War Trophy Responds

Approaching the half pole, Loyal Legion moved up head and head with Seven League as Kirk waited close by with War Trophy. Jockey Mike Basile tried to make Seven League stay with Loyal Legion but the 3-year-old weakened.

Loyal Legion then took command only to be threatened at once by War Trophy's move. Entering the stretch, Loyal Legion still held the lead with Jockey Teddy Atkinson whipping hard. Kirk, however, roused War Trophy. The son of Trace Call responded and gradually wore down Loyal Legion and was drawing clear at the end.

The Riggs was worth $19,500 to the winner and sent War Trophy's 1948 earnings to $55,750. The stake was the sixth won by Jockey Kirk during the Maryland fall season.

H. H. Hecht's The Pincher, creator of a new track record of 6 furlongs in his previous appearance, was the easiest kind of a winner in the Rose Leaves. the day's secondary feature. Jockey Mike Basile jogged the colt home five lengths ahead of D. A. Rosenbaum's Friendly Frank with Mrs. P. A. B. Widener's Whiffenpoof third in the field of 10.

The Pincher was the shortest-priced winner of the meeting, bringing his legion of backers a mere $2.60. He was clocked in 1:11, four fifths over his track-record effort of last week.

It was no contest. The Pincher hopped to the front at the break and it was simply a question of his time, margin and price from that point to the wire.

Kirk, in addition to his Riggs victory, had a hand in producing a $32.80 daily double on the 4-6 combination. With Mrs. C. A. Riggs Best Blue under him, Kirk was home in front with the $4.20 winner in the second race. The first had gone to J. N. Fishback's Larkaround at $12.80 with Apprentice W. Gilbert up.

Caps After 4th In Row Against Royals Wednesday

Coach Red Auerbach's Washington Caps go after their fourth consecutive Basketball Association of America victory tomorrow night against the towering Rochester Royals at Uline Arena, 8:45 o'clock.

On Thursday the local pros move to Baltimore's Coliseum to oppose the champion Bullets, but return to Uline's against Fort Wayne Saturday night.

The Royals were in the National Basketball League for three years prior to changing over to the BAA this season. They won two NBL championships and finished as runner-up to Minneapolis last year.

Louis Cuts Eye In Exhibition

Boston, Nov. 8 (AP).—After giving an impressive demonstration of his famed two-fisted punching power, Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis came out of the exhibition boxing bout with Johnny Shkor of Baltimore with a slightly scraped upper left eyelid tonight.

That minor injury, which bled only slightly, resulted from an accidental head bumping just before the end of the four-round no-decision engagement. Louis weighed 220.

Notre Dame's Sitko May Not Play Saturday

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 8 (AP).—Medical examination showed today that Emil Sitko, Notre Dame right halfback, had suffered a broken rib cartilage and might not start against Northwestern this Saturday. He suffered the injury last week in Notre Dame's victory over Indiana.

Only 22 Teams Are Unbeaten and Untied

New York, Nov. 7 (U.P.).—The litter of broken perfect records was strewn from the hills of Vermont to the flat lands of Nevada today in an upheaval of beaten, untied football teams that blasted four big and five little outfits from the ranks, leaving 22 survivors.

It was the heaviest toll of top-flight teams taken this season and left only Michigan and Notre Dame in the Midwest, Clemson in the South, Army in the East, and California on the Pacific as the major perfect teams.

Tumbling out of the ranks were Pennsylvania's Quakers who were toppled by Penn State, North Carolina which suffered a tie against William & Mary, Georgia Tech which was resoundingly upset by Tennessee, and Nevada's voracious Wolfpack which was blanked by unsung Santa Clara.

The little fellows removed from the list were Middlebury of Vermont, which lost to Union; Austin Peay of Tennessee, trimmed by Delta State; Sewanee, also of Tennessee, tied by Millsaps; Adams State of Colorado, which dropped out at the expense of Sul Ross State of Texas; and St. Thomas of Minnesota, beaten by Loras of Iowa.

EIGHT VICTORIES—California, Bloomsburg (Pa.) Tchrs., Sul Ross (Tex.) State.

SEVEN VICTORIES—Michigan, Notre Dame, Denison, Ohio; Heidelberg, Ohio; Bowling Green, Ohio; Wilberforce State, Ohio; Alma, Mich.; Washington, Mo.; Army, West Liberty State, W. Va.; Florida A. & M.

SIX VICTORIES—Wesleyan, Conn.; Clemson, Virginia State, Lewis and Clark, Occidental.

FIVE VICTORIES—Michigan Tech, Fort Valley State, Ga.;

West, Jackson Bout Given OK

A 12-round bout between Sonny Boy West and Stonewall Jackson with the winner to be declared the lightweight champion of the District was approved yesterday by the Boxing Commission.

The fight will be held November 17 at Uline Arena under the promotional banner of Goldie Ahearn's Liberty Athletic Club.

The two local boys have met once before with Jackson, an unorthodox, clowning fighter, defeating West in Baltimore. West is a stablemate of Middleweight Smuggy Hursey.

Jackson's last showing here, three weeks ago, saw him score a unanimous, but unimpressive victory over Tim Dalton of Chicago at Turner's Arena.

West has lost but two fights in his career. Henry Lassane of Houston whipped him on a six-round preliminary bout last summer and his only other loss in 36 pro fights was to Jackson.

Roller Hockey Comes Back to Riverside Tonight

The recently formed Mason-Dixon Roller Hockey League brings roller skating hockey back to Washington tonight after a six-year lapse when the Riverside Rollers welcome the Baltimore Athletic Club in the league opener at Riverside Stadium.

Four charter members comprise the league so far—Washington, Baltimore, York, Pa., and Mechanicsburg, Pa. They formed the league in Baltimore last month and expect teams from Elkton, Md.; Harrisburg, Pa., and Atlantic City to join it before long.

Roller hockey was played in Washington before ice hockey came to town and old fans will meet their favorites of 1939 and 1940.

Red Terror Is Unmasked

The mysterious Red Terror was unmasked last night by three irate opponents and was revealed as none other than Lew Laird, an escaped inmate of the Los Angeles wrestling parlors.

Wally Dusek had just pinned the Terror in the Uline Arena feature when Olaf Erickson and Paddy Mack joined Dusek in the ring. All three hopped on the Terror, ripped off his mask.

In the other bouts Erickson drew with George Sikorski, George Lenihan beat Mack, Jim Wallis lost to Arno Skaaland on a disqualification, and Pete Peterson pinned Joe Ludlum.

High Games Shifted

The Western-Coolidge interhigh football game, originally scheduled for Saturday, will be played on Wednesday instead at 3:15 p. m. at Western.

Farm Income To Dip in '49, Report Says

Prices of 1949 farm products are likely to average slightly lower than in 1948, despite probable continued upward tendencies for non-agricultural products, the Maryland Extension Service reported yesterday.

Farmers' costs next year, despite lower feed prices, probably will be about as high this year, the report declared.

The report predicates its forecast on developments in our relations with Russia. If war does not come and a period of uneasy peace develops into something more substantial, prices of farm products probably have reached their peak, the report said.

Prices of most major farm crops already have fallen to an area approaching the support levels, it was pointed out. Provision of support for Maryland tobacco is expected with a support price of 44.1 cents a pound. The 1947 crop sold this year averaged 41.6 cents a pound.

Farm Schools Giving Break To City Boy

Land grant colleges and universities now are making it easier for the city boy who wants to be a farmer.

That was disclosed yesterday by a committee of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities holding a preliminary session before today's opening of the 62d annual convention of the association.

Dean C. M. Shepardson, of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, reported to the agriculture committee on organization and policy, that schools formerly required applicants to have some experience in farming, but now the tendency is to accept students who know nothing about it.

Major subjects to come before the association during its three-day session at the Washington and Willard Hotels will be a broadening of the educational program offered by the land grant schools to include more cultural courses.

The schools using funds from the sale of Federal property for the teaching of merchanical and agricultural subjects at present stress technical training over general education.

Speakers at today's general session at 10 a. m. in the Washington Hotel's Hall of Nations will be Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Army Chief of Staff; Lewis Webster Jones, president of the University of Arkansas and member of the President's Commission on Higher Education; and J. L. Morrill, president of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities.

Prober Is Told

U. S. Paid Rent, Own Space Idle

Baltimore, Nov. 8 (AP).—The Federal Government spent more than one million dollars to rent storage space here while a huge building it owned in the city was lying idle, Senator Herbert R. O'Conor (D., Md.) was told today.

O'Conor is sitting as a special Senate subcommittee investigating the Government's sale of the warehouse-like building to private interests for $508,000.

It was also testified that:

1. The Government Printing Office paid rent equivalent to $5 per square foot of storage space a year on a pier to a "middleman" who rented the space from the city at 65 cents a square foot.

2. Just before the sale a few months ago of the building in question, the War Assets Administration rejected the plea of the Public Building Administration to make available to Federal agencies the 213,000 square feet of space contained in the building.

3. The Baltimore group which purchased the building has offered to rent part of the space to the Government Printing Office at a price which would pay for the structure in six years.

Owner Rules Use of Land, Court Decides

A landlord has the power to control the use of the soil on his farm by his tenant, an Iowa court ruled this week. The case, Agriculture Department officials believe, is an important advance for soil conservation.

In Carroll County, Iowa, a jury awarded a landlord $300 actual damages and $200 exemplary damages (punishment) because a tenant farmer plowed up 15 acres of hayland and put in into corn.

Tests on an experimental farm by soil conservation experts were used to show that from 20 to 30 tons of topsoil per acre were lost as a result of hayland being plowed for corn. O. W. Kelly, technician with the Soil Conservation Service at Carroll, Iowa, was chief witness for the landlord.

The landlord, Louis Rickers, had asked $1500 damages of his tenant Henry Kroeger. It had been rented for the season for $11 an acre. The damage awarded was $20 an acre. Instructions of Judge R. L. McCord, were for the jury to base actual damages on the difference in the fair and reasonable market value of the land after it had been plowed as compared with the previous value.

Bulldozer Finds Car in Texas Brush 12 Years

Corpus Christi, Tex., Nov. 8 (AP). Palfrey Richter hasn't decided yet what to do with his 1932 model car, lost in the brush on the vast King Ranch of south Texas for 12 years.

In 1936 Richter and a pal, Glenn Kirkpatrick, took off for fishing on the King Ranch.

They parked the car, a Chevrolet convertible coupe, near live oak brush and headed off. But when they were ready to go back—

"We forgot where we left it," Richter chuckled. They made a futile search and then gave up.

For 12 years cowhands worked that brush on roundups twice a year. The thicket was 10 feet high when a bulldozer nosed into it last Thursday.

The convertible was a sad sight. The wheels were half buried in the sand. The cloth top wooden struts and upholstery were gone but the tires still had air and the chromium was shining.

The insurance company had paid off long ago and was no longer interested.

"They told me I could have it," Richter said. "And I'm going after it. Those old parts are still usable."

The King ranch covers approximately a million acres between Corpus Christi and the Rio Grande.

Mrs. Morgan Paces Greenbelt Rifle Win

A new Maryland Rifle League record for ladies was set last night by Mrs. Ruth Morgan of Greenbelt, as her team romped to a 1374-1350 victory over Berwyn at the University of Maryland ranges. Mrs. Morgan fired a 279x 300.

Kensington5s Louise Garvin also broke the old record and was a single point behind the new leader as Kensington whipped Maryland frosh, 1356 to 1340.

Portmaker Loses Lead To Adventure at New York

the Seven Stars Stable at Southern Pines, N. C., with 9½ points, and Times Square, owned by Vernon G. Cardy of Montreal, Canada, with 9.

Adventure also leads in the young hunter division, but missed a chance to boost his point total this afternoon when his record kept him on the sidelines in a class for young hunters with less than six blue ribbons to their credit.

The blue ribbon in that event went to Rain Slicker, a 3-year-old owned and ridden by Morton W. Smith of Middleburg, Va., while Flagshon, another Seven Star Stable entry, placed second. The two of them moved into a second place tie in the young hunter scoring with five and a half points each, two less than Adventure.

The military jumping competition this afternoon produced the first upset of the talented Mexican Army team since the second night of the show. Lieut. W. R. Ballard of the Canadian team captured the International Goodwill trophy on his brown gelding, Skip Across.

It was the second Canadian triumph of the show for the Canadians. The Mexican team has won eight military events and the French riders one.

Move Starts to Give Permanent Status To War Appointees

A new move is afoot to blanket some war service people into permanent Civil Service jobs through noncompetitive tests.

President Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission yesterday conceded such a plan was in the "talk stage." He would not speculate on when such an order would be issued, if ever.

Mitchell said he personally was "most anxious" to complete the task of converting Government personnel back to peacetime standards, indicating his probable support of a reasonable blanketing-in order. He suggested a good case could be made for (1) good employes in jobs where there is a shortage of qualified help like stenographers, and (2) specialists.

The sooner employes of this type are given permanent Civil Service status the sooner the Government will become stabilized in a personnel way. It would be both economical and efficient to blanket them into permanent Civil Service jobs. People in labor shortage jobs wouldn't be competing with as good or better people anyway because the Government now has more jobs than it can fill.

As for specialists, it would be exceedingly costly to hold open Nation-wide exams to fill a dozen jobs here and a score there. There aren't more than 4000 or 5000 people in the specialist field and most of them had to be persuaded to take Federal jobs in the first place. It isn't likely that many people would compete for open competitive exams anyway.

Heretofore, the blanketing-in plans were laid on a different basis. As reported here at the time, the President was urged to blanket into Civil Service all war service and temporary employes who had been in their jobs at least five years. However, word got back to the White House that GOP leaders in Congress had threatened to withhold salaries for any employes who would be benefited by the proposed order. Also, Civil Service opposed the order.

Shortly before the election another plan was put forward to cover into Civil Service those employes who were in Government on or before March 15, 1942, the day war service appointments were started. Such an order could be easily defended since the people appointed before that date were denied permanent status on technicalities. Nevertheless, the White House decided to postpone action until after the election.

With President Truman firmly in the saddle, it's a good bet that some sort of order will be issued eventually and that Civil Service will recommend it. There is ample precedent for it. After World War I, President Coolidge ordered the blanketing-in of several thousand employes who had been brought in during the war, and Congress blanketed in upwards of 75,000 in a 1940 Ramspeck Act.

STORY: Representative Harness (R., Ind.) has been doing his best to harass Interior's Reclamation Service. Up until the election, he made demands on the agency every day or so for records on this, that and the other project. The day after the election Commissioner Straus sat down and with a chuckle wrote Harness a note which said:

"I have your many requests for information. I shall be glad to discuss them with you on your next visit to Washington."

PS: Harness won't be back in the new Congress; he was soundly defeated.

CIVIL SERVICE: Now that Truman is reelected, the White House has been urged to keep on Harry B. Mitchell as president of the Civil Service Commission. Employes of the commission are among those who have joined the "draft Mitchell" movement.

Mitchell is over the compulsory retirement age and the White House extended his term until December 31. He will leave then unless he gets another extension. Mitchell, who has been in the job longer than anyone in history, will not seek to keep his post. His many friends are making a campaign for him.

NOTES: The next meeting of AFGE's District Department has been postponed to November 17 . . . At Justice, David Reich has resigned as a special assistant to the Attorney General to practice law here . . . Clifford F. Evers is the new head of the United States Fishery Technological Laboratory at College Park, Md. . . . At Walter Reed Hospital, the first meritorious civilian service awards went to Harry P. Carr for his work as superintendent of construction, and to Leonard Hazelock, a surgical technician.

EXAMS: Civil Service today is accepting applications for these tests: pharmacologist, $3727 to $10,305; engineer, physicist, metallurgist, and mathematician, $2974, and student aid trainee, $2724.

In the works for later this month will be exams for personnel officer and other types of personnel jobs to pay from $3727 to $4479 to start; one for apprenticeship representative and related Labor Department jobs to pay from $3727 to $7432 a year, and a third test for printer, hand composition, and junior hand composing, to pay from $1.17 to $2.13 an hour.

Sobbing Rancher Held for Trial In Shot-Gun Slaying of His Niece

THE CIGARETTE WENT FAST—Candid camera faces of Orval N. Jackson, taken yesterday as an inquest jury debated, then held him for the slaying of Mrs. Mary Jane Frei. Tensely on edge, he drew deeply on a cigarette and muttered, " . . . everything smoky—can't remember.....His face was drawn, his stricken eyes were never still, his hands trembled

Council Aims Blow at Land Speculation

Sets 18-Month Limit For Developing Rezoned Falls Church Land

Falls Church City Council last night tacked a special clause on its rezoning action designed to prevent land speculation.

The clause said that "the property may be rezoned to its present status at the end of 18 months if no commercial development has begun."

Affected by the ruling in last night's action, is land at 226 W. Broad st.

In presenting the rezoning recommendation and the rider, City Planning Commission Chairman Edward Krouse said the latter was aimed at "discouraging speculation in land and at the same time encouraging utilization of the land."

He said the clause, which he described as "unusual" in city zoning actions, was not intended to discourage investors. Of the nine councilmen, Boyd Case and Jack Eakin dissented.

The council also resolved last night that any future installation of water, sewer, or other facilities for any private person or firm shall be paid for in advance by the recipient.

Councilman Lee M. Rhoads' amendment, that the city advise the Tyler Corporation it must pay for city water main installation or face "appropriate action" by the city, also was adopted.

City Treasurer James E. Ferguson told the council that the Tyler Gardens apartment development now under construction still owes the city $2565 for water installation and meter service by the city.

Refuses to Testify But Questions Victim's Estranged Husband

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Orval N. Jackson, self-styled retired rancher, was held for grand jury action yesterday in the shotgun death of Mrs. Mary Jane Frei, 48, at her home, 4609 Polk st. ne., Friday.

Jackson, an uncle of Mrs. Frei by marriage, had lived at the Polk st. address since May. He was bound over by a coroner's jury following a District Court hearing punctuated by his sobs and marked by his refusal to take the witness stand.

Principal witness was the dead woman's son, Harold J. Frei, 27, 380 37th pl. se., who testified he was visiting at the house at the time of the shooting.

Frei said he, Jackson and his mother had "about two highballs" together. A few minutes after Jackson followed Mrs. Frei upstairs Frei heard a shot, he testified. He said he met Jackson, carrying a double-barrelled shotgun, on the stairs, tried to get the weapon, and it went off again. During the struggle for the shotgun, Frei said, Jackson told him "I've just shot Mary," and also remarked about "having another shell in the gun."

Finally Jackson relinquished the shotgun and went out, and Frei rushed upstairs to find his mother lying on the bathroom floor, a gaping wound in her neck, he told the jury.

Both Lieut. John Leyton of a special investigating squad and Detective Sergt. Robert Kirby of the homicide squad said Jackson told them the night of the shooting he had gone upstairs to investigate a noise, and fired the shotgun "when something flashed by." The next day, however, he refuted that version and told them he could not clearly recall events that transpired after he went npstairs, the police officers said.

H. J. Frei Jacob Frei
AT INQUEST—Son and husband of the slain woman. They testified

Although he sobbed into a handkerchief during most of the hearing, Jackson recovered his composure sufficiently at one point to question the dead woman's estranged husband, Jacob Frei, 1326 H st. se., who also appeared as a witness. His questions centered on a telephone call Frei made to the house shortly before the shooting, and brought conflicting testimony as to whether Jackson had demanded money of Mrs. Frei.

Frei, who said he and his wife were on "very friendly terms" despite their separation, said he had received letters from Mrs. Frei in which she had stated she was afraid of Jackson because he had frequently threatened to kill her.

Jackson was arrested less than an hour after the shooting at the home of Capitol Policeman Francis A. Del Balzo, 4554 Lily Pond dr., se., where he attempted to stab himself with a pocket knife after asking permission to use the telephone.

County Delegates Won't Run For Montgomery Council

Members of the Montgomery County legislative delegation last night eliminated themselves as candidates for the county's charter council to be elected January 6.

Six of the seven delegates, all Republicans, indorsed the charter form of government before it was voted in at the polls last Tuesday.

Speaking for the delegation which met last night, Mrs. Leona Rush announced that "no member of the legislative delegation will consider resigning" to run for the council.

Mrs. Rush recalled that the GOP in 1946 had pledged there would be "no office juggling," and that the party policy will be upheld.

Shearin Will Explain Charter Government

The Montgomery County charter form of government will be explained to members of the Sligo Citizens Association of Silver Spring, Md., at 8 p. m. Wednesday by Plummer Shearin, executive director of the charter committee.

All citizens' associations and residents in the area are invited to attend the meeting, to be held in the Silver Spring Elementary School.

Purse-Snatching Case Set Over to Friday

The case of an alleged contrite purse-snatcher was continued yesterday in Municipal Court until Friday. He is Leroy Roach, 24, a porter, of Readsville, Va. Police said that he hit Mrs. Grace Dubac, 43, of 1616 16th st. nw., while she was walking near Meridian Park and took her purse. Later he surrendered to police, saying he feared that he had harmed her. She was reported recovering in Garfield Hospital from the blows.

Recital Tonight to Aid Church Building Fund

The first of a series of recitals for the benefit of the building fund of the Mount Vernon Methodist Church, 1909 Capitol ave. ne., will be given at 8 p. m. today by the church choir.

The recital, featuring Quincy D. Meeks, violinist and Joseph Cox, violin and musical saw artist, will be held in the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church at 900 Massachusetts ave. nw.

Traffic Chief Would Scrap Permit Board

Director to Seek Authority in Study Of Drivers' Cases

A recommendation to dispense with the Commissioners' Board of Revocation and Restoration of Operators' Permits and to place its authority in the hands of the director of traffic will be presented District Commissioners within 10 days.

This was disclosed last night by Traffic Director George E. Keneipp.

Keneipp told the Mount Pleasant Citizens Association, meeting at the Mount Pleasant Branch Library, 16th and Lamont sts. nw., that his plan would give his staff "more time to review records of accident-prone motorists.'

He said, at present, the board reviews cases involving possible revocation of permits without giving the offender a hearing.

If the permit is revoked or suspended, the holder frequently is given no notice of his right of appeal or review, Keneipp said.. If he does appeal, he said, "the board itself is the appelate body on its own ruling."

Under his plan, he said, the hearing would be conducted by a duly qualified and appointed representative of the traffic director and the director then would review the testimony along with his agent's recommendation, and make a decision on whether the permit should be kept in force.

Control of Play Areas By Board Is Supported

Continued control of District recreation areas by the Recreation Board, as advocated by the Commissioners, was supported last night by the Glover Park Citizens Association.

The group opposed the recent ruling of the Interior Department solicitor transferring control to the National Park Service, which is awaiting approval by the Attorney General. The group met at Benjamin Stoddert School, 39th and Calvert sts. nw.

Appropriation of $106, or half the cost, was voted toward purchase of a refrigerator for the Stoddert School in conjunction with the school P-TA.

F. S. Tilton Reelected By Kalorama Citizens

Fletcher S. Tilton, 1843 Mintwood pl. nw., was reelected president of Kalorama Citizens Association last night at a meeting attended by 65 members at Adams School, 19th and California sts. nw.

Ernest Greene was named first vice president; Mrs. Harvey Wiley, treasurer; and Miss Margaret Trewhella, secretary.

The meeting endorsed a report from the Neighborhood Council of Citizens Associations, telling of start of a movement for a branch library for the Dupont Circle area.

Montgomery School Board Bill Backed

Resolution Calls For Election of Members Instead Of Appointment

A resolution calling for elected instead of appointed school board members was almost unanimously adopted last night by the Montgomery County Civic Federation, meeting in the Bethesda Elementary School.

Approximately 150 delegates from Montgomery County groups heard Roy C. Potts, of the federation's school committee, describe the present gubernatorial appointment of school board members as "antiquated."

In a resolution, presented for federation action, the school committee asked the federation to indorse a proposed bill which would allow county voters to determine in 1950 whether to adopt popular election of school board members.

Bill Setst 1956 Date

The proposed bill calls for replacement of appointed members by seven elected members by 1956.

If the elected system is approved in 1950, nonpartisan biennial elections would be held for two members, beginning in April, 1951. The present appointed board is made up of six members.

The school committee quoted a recent report of a study committee of the County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, which drew up the proposed bill in conferences with the county's legislative delegation.

The P-TA report described Maryland as the only State where county school board members are appointed by the Governor. The report also declared that Maryland is one of only three States in which selection of school board members is a State instead of a local matter.

Three of the seven members of the county's legislative delegation attended last night's meeting.

Delegate DeWitt S. Hyde said he was committed to the nonpartisan elected school board member bill. Delegate R. Duncan Clark said he favored election of school board members on a county-wide basis rather than on a commissioner-district basis. Delegate John R. Reeves said he was "not prepared" to say whether he favored eliminating party elections for school board members.

Delegates Lewis B. Sims and Blair Lee 3d spoke in favor of school board members being appointed by the Montgomery County Council instead of by the Governor.

Communism Study Urged By Mrs. Doyle

The meaning of communism should be taught in the schools, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the District Board of Education, said here yesterday.

In a National Education Week broadcast over WMAL, Mrs. Doyle said she agreed with General Eisenhower's declaration, in his inaugural address as president of Columbia University, that communism should be taught in schools, because "to fight communism you must know what it is."

Mrs. Doyle said that communism like cancer must be known to be conquered.

Mrs. Doyle also stressed that the classroom teacher is the most important single factor in education.

The school head called on local residents to help the school board secure from the new Congress a pay raise and sick leave for teachers.

She described qualified personnel as the first great need of schools, pointing out that the local school system now has 478 temporary instructors. In second place she put the school building program.

In discussing curriculum, Mrs. Doyle said that American history and study of the Constitution always have been required courses in the local school system.

The Board of Education never approved the practice fashionable some years ago of debunking American heroes she said.

Disturbing Trends In D. C. Education Cited by Eklund

John E. Eklund, president of the American Federation of Teachers (AFL), last night cited what he called two "disturbing" educational tendencies here.

He listed them as:

1. Failure of the District in last year's budget "to make use of a chance to reduce class size."

2. Pyramiding of school administration—an "increase disproportionately of administrators over teachers."

Eklund spoke at a meeting of District teachers at Meridian Hill Hotel.

Eklund also expressed "alarm" over wage raises for Federal employes, with District employes excluded.

'Zooriosity'

4 Tiger Cubs Mothered By a Puma

Four Bengal tiger cubs born at the Zoo Sunday showed promise yesterday of breaking a 20-year record—by living.

Headkeeper Frank O. Lowe broke the first precedent by getting them away from their mother as quickly as they were born. Then he further departed from tradition by placing them with a mother puma to nurse. Last night the baby Bengals were pronounced fit as fiddles and doing nicely.

If they live, it'll be news for their mother has killed off three previous litters, of four, three and one, by "worrying" them to death as she carried them around in her mouth. Like all Bengal tiger females, the mother's name is Gal. The father, like all Bengal tiger males, is called—you guessed it—Ben. The cubs' parents came to the Zoo 10 years ago when both were about 2½ or 3 years old.

The mother puma had two cubs 27 days ago, and they were strong enough to be put on bottled milk when the tiger cubs were born. So Lowe took them away from their mother and gave her the two tiger cubs to nurse. Lowe had never heard of anyone doing that before, but the puma didn't seem to mind.

The headkeeper took the other two new-born cubs home with him and gave them a special milk solution every two hours throughout the night. Yesterday, when he found that the puma was still treating the baby tigers with all the love and care she gave her own cubs, he gave her the other two to raise. The puma and the four tiger cubs were placed in quiet isolation and will not be receiving the public for about a month.

The new arrivals weigh 2½ pounds each and are about 18 inches long, including tails. They bring the Zoo's tiger colony to nine. One male died two months ago.

Chest Still $1,863,578 Short of Goal

Officials Hope to Get $300,000 Today to Top $3,000,000 Mark

The Community Chest, which must collect $1,863,578 more to meet its 1949 campaign goal, will hold a general report luncheon at 12:15 p. m. today in the Washington Hotel.

Objective of the day, according to Chauncey G. Parker, general chairman, is to bring in an additional $300,000—enough to put the drive past the three million dollar mark. Last week the Red Feather thermometer stood at 59.19 per cent of the $4,566,790 goal for Greater Washington, with contributions so far of $2,703,212:33.

Only 235,850 gifts have been received to date, compared to 385,000 set up as the campaign goal.

In stressing greater cooperation, officials pointed out the Community Chest directly benefits about one out of every five residents of the District, Alexandria and Arlington, Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties. It helps to support 104 member agencies that provide family and child welfare services, as well as health, education and recreation programs. And it is scheduled to contribute—if the drive succeeds—$850,000 to the Greater Washington hospitalization fund and $60,000 to the reactivated United Services Organization.

2 Holdup Men Rob Maryland Grocer of $800

Two armed holdup men last night robbed a Silver Hill, Md., grocer of about $800 shortly before closing time.

Ralph Mishkin, 30, proprietor of the Silver Hill Market at 3913 Branch ave., said one of the men resembled one of a pair which robbed him of $1200 about six months ago.

Mishkin and his wife, Esther, 29, were alone in the store preparing to close for the night when the pair entered about 8:30 p. m., the owner said. One pulled a .32-caliber blue steel automatic and ordered him to open the register and safe, he said.

The men were described as wearing blue, knitted Navy skullcaps pulled over their ears and dirty gray satin warmup jackets trimmed with red. The first man was 5 feet 8 inches tall and weighed about 150 to 160 pounds, the owner said, and the second, the familiar one, about 5 fet 9¼ inches and "very chubby."

Kilmer Girl Tells Jury She Pleaded With Rookie

Says He Ignored Her Warnings Until Crippling Shot Ended Play

(Picture on Page B-2)

By Adrienne Tassler
Post Reporter

Dorothy Kilmer, pale but serene, told a District Court jury from a wheelchair yesterday that she "kept begging" Wayne W. Edmondson, 22, to put his gun away but "he wouldn't.

"That's the way people get shot," Dorothy, 19, said she warned the former rookie policeman, now charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. A shot fired by Edmondson, July 29, injured Dorothy's spine, palayzing her from the waist down and making it unlikely she'll ever walk again.

Companion Cleared of Shooting

Edmondson's companion, Roland H. Holifield, 26, also a rookie policeman, originally was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon. A directed verdict at the opening of the trial cleared Holifield of the shooting, although another charge is still pending against him for failing to arrest Edmondson in the shooting. Both have been discharged from the police force.

"You wouldn't shoot me," the girl testified she told Edmondson shortly before the gun went off in the Palm Grove Club, 1601 14th st. nw. "If you kill me, you would die, too."

As the jury of nine men and three women moved forward to catch her soft, scarcely audible remarks, Dorothy testified she told the defendant "again to put the gun away," but he "got a look on his face as if he were going to shoot." She said he cocked the gun and it went off.

Asked what happened to Edmondson after she fell to the floor, the witness, looking like a schoolgirl, in a white cardigan sweater, said:

She said his companion, Holifield, "left, too."

Manager Testifies

Earlier, George B. Stott, 41, manager of the Palm Grove, related what happened the morning Dorothy was shot. He testified that Dorothy came in shortly after 2 a. m. and joined a party in the rear of the after-hours club. Edmondson, of 2210 Shannon pl. se., and Holifield of 4000 Ely pl. se., had come in about 20 minutes earlier and were seated in a booth together, he said.

He reported there was an "incident" on the outside and the two rookie policemen went out to "look into" it. "They exchanged guns" first, he said.

The two, he testified, took a man into custody for selling bootleg whisky and turned him over to scout car patrolmen. Dorothy had gone outside, too, but came back in to pick up her purse at the checkroom.

When the policemen returned to the club, Stott testified, they held guns in their hands. Edmondson pointed his pistol at Dorothy, Stott said, "saying eenie, meenie, minie . . ."

"All of a sudden he put his finger down on the hammer of the gun and the next thing I knew there was just a flash," Stott declared. Questioned closely, Stott said:

"He was waying the gun back and forth—just fooling around."

"Only a Scratch"

Howard L. Patterson, 41, assistant manager of the Palm Grove, testified Edmonson "knelt down" beside Dorothy after she'd fallen, looked at the wound in her left chest and remarked: "It was only a scratch." Shortly afterward, Patterson said, the two policemen left.

The trial will resume at 10 a. m. today. Defense Attorney Charles Ford said it may go to the jury by afternoon.

D. C. Public Schools Get 2-Day Holiday

Length of the Armistice Day holiday will vary for Greater Washington school pupils, a survey yesterday showed.

In Montgomery County, pupils will have no Armistice Day holiday at all.

District public schools will be closed both Thursday and Friday.

Parochial schools in the Catholic archdiocese of Washington will close Thursday, with classes resuming on Friday.

Arlington and Alexandria schools will be closed Thursday as will all Fairfax County schools except the Oak Street School in Falls Church.

First, third, fourth and seventh grade students at the Oak Street School have been ordered to report to make up for time lost earlier in the semester when the school was closed. Second, fifth and sixth grade classes will not be in session, to permit the teachers to attend a conference.

Most public schools will be closed in Prince Georges County Thursday. Principals, however, may call the schools into session if necessary to make up lost time.

Brief Kidnap Scare

A 3-year-old visitor to Mount Rainier got lost yesterday, upsetting her mother and the Mount Rainier and Prince Georges County police and volunteer firemen.

The kidnap scare ended happily, however, when the child, Barbara Sue Colburn of Haleyville, Ala., was found being taken to the police station by William E. Uber, a laundryman, of 5418 15th st. Mount Rainier.

Uber had discovered her crying on the street. He took her home to his family in hope a platter of cookies might get her to stop wailing long enough to identify herself. His strategy, however, proved unsuccessful and he decided to put it up to the police.

The little girl had wandered away from her mother while both were visiting the child's aunt, Mrs. Perry Mazing, 4009 30th st., Mount Rainier.

To 'Defend' Bolling Field

District and Virginia National Guard fighter squadrons will defend Bolling Field from a simulated bombing attack during aerial maneuvers here Thursday.

The attacking force, 90 planes of the Fifty-fifth Fighter Wing of Columbus, Ohio, will first be intercepted by Pennsylvania air units at Duncannon and at York, Pa.

Following the "bombing," attackers and defenders will join formation and pass over Washington in aerial review. All aircraft will land at Andrews Field for refueling and mess before returning to home stations.

No Slander Verdict

A new trial in the $10,000 slander suit of an Arlington woman against her neighbor was made necessary yesterday after the Arlington Circuit Court jury failed to agree on a verdict.

Suit was brought by Miss Anna Schau, 1316 N. Wayne st., Arlington, charging her neighbor, Mrs. Geraldine Moskowitz, 1217 N. Wayne st., "maliciously" slandered her good name. Mrs. Moskowitz denied the charge in court.

The new trial will be heard in the next term of Circuit Court beginning in December. Meantime, four other $10,000 slander suits based on the same charges are scheduled for hearing during this term.

Woman's Fire Leap Injures Her Rescuer

47-year-old man who attempted to catch a woman, 55, as she fell two stories from her burning home yesterday, saved her from probable serious injuries, but suffered a fractured vertebra himself.

The man, Charles Green of 740 New Jersey ave. nw., succeeded in breaking the fall of Alice Harvey, as she tried to escape from her flaming home at 743 4th st. nw. Mrs. Harvey was unhurt; Green was admitted to Freedmen's Hospital in fair condition.

Police said the woman apparently fell when she tried to climb onto a ladded that was too short to reach the second floor window where she was trapped. The ladder had been placed there by a neighbor before the Fire Department arrived.

The fire, of undetermined origin, burned out most of the second and third floors of the three-story brick dwelling, firemen said.

Camera Theft Gets Man 1-Year Term

Frederick Smith, 34, of 826 S. Washington st., Alexandria, drew a one-year penitentiary sentence in Arlington Circuit Court for the theft of a movie camera.

Police said the camera had been taken from the Ludwig Photo Co., 2101 Wilson blvd., Arlington. Smith was charged with grand larceny.

Cases of two other men were referred to the probation officer. They were Harvey E. Flowers, 46, of Route 2, Alexandria, who pleaded guilty to petty larceny in the theft of a quantity of bricks, and Aubrey Costin, 48, of 4213 Wilson blv., accused of simple assault.

A fourth man to come before the court yesterday, Astor G. Godwin, 33, of 4213 Wilson blvd., was fined $50 and given a 30-day suspended sentence after pleading guilty to simple assault.

Jury Trial Granted

Arrested after Georgetown residents complained of squirrel hunting, two men yesterday were granted a jury trial in Municipal Court December 9 on charges of carrying deadly weapons.

They are Joseph Crampton, 35, and Clark Brown, 35, both of 3637 Canal rd. nw.

The men were arrested in a woods at 37th st. and Prospect ave. nw. Police quoted them as saying they had taken a few shots at trees but were not aiming at squirels.

Inquest Jury Orders Bus Driver Held

Henry N. Wynkoop, jr., Capital Transit Co. bus driver was held for Municipal Court action on a negligent homicide charge yesterday in the death of a 73-year-old pedestrian November 4.

Wynkoop, 21, was charged after a coroner's jury deliberated 40 minutes before ordering that he be held in the death of William C. Ridenour, 1417 Potomac ave. se., fatally injured when he was struck by a bus operated by Wynkoop at Potomac ave. and 15th st. se., October 7.

According to testimony at the inquest, Ridenour was crossing Potomac ave. from east to west, when he was struck by the bus as it made a left turn from Potomac ave. into 15th st. His death almost a month later was attributed to a fractured skull.

Wynkoop declined to testify at the inquest, but admitted a statement he gave police the night of the accident. In it, he said his attention was centered on an oncoming truck, which was approaching a stop sign on the west side of Potomac ave., and he failed to see Ridenour until a passenger shouted a warning.

The bus driver's statement said he was "temporarily blinded" by the lights of eastbound traffic.

It was disclosed at the inquest that Ridenour had suffered a fall from his bed at Emergency Hospital about a week before his death. However, Dr. Doris Knox of the hospital staff said the fall apparently caused no additional injuries, and his condition remained unchanged.

Wynkoop, who lives at 405 10th st. ne., was released under $500 bond.

Recreation Emphasis by Planners Seen

Recreation will be given greater consideration in future community and town planning, Charles K. Brightbill, national director of the Veterans Administration recreation service, predicted here last night.

Speaking at the last of four seminars sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews at the Mount Vernon Methodist Church, 9th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., Brightbill cited what he termed a definite trend toward greater emphasis on the role of recreation in community life.

The sedentary pushbutton life that many persons lead, he declared, may make recreational programs a survival pattern for communities. He urged communities to place "character ahead of chromium and health ahead of hangovers."

Explaining recreation in veterans hospitals, Brightbill told more than 100 persons present that recreation is instrumental in aiding patients to regain health. The programs help stimulate morale, restore confidence and prepare the patient for the outside world, he added.

He warned, however, that a recreational program is not a civic "pill" for community health problems.

License Revocation Up

The District Alcoholic Beverage Control Board yesterday took under advisement a proposal for revocation of a retail Class B liquor license held by Simon Gross at 50 Fenton pl. nw. The proposed revocation is based on abandonment of business. No witnesses appeared for Gross at the scheduled hearing.

Girl, 15, Who Has Lived With Superstitious Grandmother Since Parents Parted Six Years Ago, Is Frightened by Talk of 'Family Curse'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 15, a freshman in high school, and I live with my grandmother, as my parents were divorced six years ago.

My grandmother, whom I call Mom, is very superstitious and goes to church regularly. She and I talk a lot about religion. When I was living with my parents we did not go to church regularly nor have much religious teaching, but still I used to think about God very often.

I have reached the conclusion that God exists only in people's minds, and although I am too young to say positively that I believe or disbelieve anything, that is my opinion.

Worries About 'Curse' on Dad

WELL, just recently my great-aunt Cora, Mom's sister, died. She lived with us, too, and after her death Mom told me that a close relative of ours, whom I had loved very much, had put a curse on this aunt and my daddy. She said this relative had called daddy to her deathbed and told him she had put a curse on him.

When I asked daddy about it, he said it was true and I didn't know what to think. I tried to pass it off as just more superstition, but now at nights after school Mom tells me more and more things about this sort of family curse, and I have nightmares about a big hand reaching out of the sky.

When I waken I think how silly it is, but still I can't help thinking about it. I try to get a perspective on the whole thing and not worry about it, but I can't help it. Please give me your opinion, as I read your articles daily and respect your good judgment. A. C.

Grandma Courts the Fate of Job

DEAR A. C.: "God is light," testifies the Apostle John, "and in Him is no darkness at all."

And any person who has ever caught a spark of this cosmic truth, whose mind or consciousness has ever been even briefly illumined by it, thereafter lives in grateful confident awareness that God's love and power are always "closer than breathing," and fears no evil incantations.

You have arrived at a fragment of truth in concluding that God exists "only" in people's minds. God exists, in all things and through all things; but as John further says, "No man hath seen God at any time, but if we love one another, God dwelleth in us

'Spies' Uncover Red Hats, Smiling Faces, Visitors From New York's Bohemia

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

THOUGH this department did not attend the thirty-first anniversary celebration of the October Revolution at the Soviet Embassy Sunday, our spies were everywhere—lurking under the (approx.) seven-foot sturgeon gracing one of the three buffets; counting the number of red hats worn as gracious gesture by many of the feminine contingent; estimating the weight of beautiful Mrs. Joseph Davies' pearls; admiring the razor-crease in former Ambassador to the USSR Davies' striped trousers; tallying the tonnage of food Washingtonians, on cook's Sunday off, managed to gorge.

Overall impression by our squad of Western Hemisphere MVD (formerly NKVD) was a great Soviet attempt at friendliness, smiles wreathing habitually dour slavic faces, innumerable toasts to "peace."

Among the more interesting guests, unfamiliar to many Capitalites, was a group of artists and their pals who journeyed from New York specially to bend elbow in celebrating Russia's most publicized revolution. Among them was Anton Refregier, the artist who created the snappy murals in Gotham's most racially mixed night club, Cafe Society, and who has had an occasional spot of trouble with investigating committees; Frieda Diamond, the industrial designer, who helped philanthropist Max Ascoli restyle Italian arts and crafts right after the war, and is a member of Paul Robeson's coterie. Queen bee however, was no less a person than redoubtable Muriel Draper, mother of dancer Paul Draper. Muriel, authoress of "Music at Midnight" and leader in New York's dressier Bohemian circles, sprouted a remarkable feathered hat, told everyone it was an encouraging sign for peaceful relations because so many had taken trouble to come from New York. Muriel, who lived many years in a victorian brownstone house on lower Lexington Avenue, which was intriguingly decorated with an occasional bleached horse skull, has always backed "liberal" movements and once made a brief junket to Moscow. Right now her pet project is an international organization of women sponsoring cultural (with a spot of propaganda) exchange.

Visitor From Moscow

CURIOUSLY, precisely on the thirty-first anniversary of the October Revolution, an old tovarish of ours blew in from Moscow. One of the few nonofficials to penetrate Muscovy in recent months, his stories were fascinating. Not having visited Russia for several years, before setting out he determined to contact old friends by telephone. He made a list of forty. Then, during three solid weeks he sat most of the day beside the New York overseas operator angling for everyone from Stalin to a pretty ballerina. For a week he couldn't reach Leningrad—the entire city was cut off from telephonic communication. By sheer persistence (there are so few telephones in Moscow, you ask for names not numbers) he talked to many on his list. Some on the list were ungettable—the Litvinoffs were "on vacation" and so was Prokofieff. But he did get in touch with the Kremlin.

Interesting sidelight to his short stay was the fact that great musician Shostakovitch, censored last year for composing nonproletarian music, is back in Soviet graces once more. He retrieved himself by creating a new opera with a score based on themes derived from old Russian folk songs.

More Election Tales

ELECTION tales will be seeping through Washington for many a moon. Over the weekend the following choice morsels were collected. Out in Chicago, where a Democrat defeated the Republican gubernatorial incumbent, where Truman smeared Dewey, a smartster cracked "It must be awful to be stood up on a date with destiny." The Alsop freres, distinquished political columnists, when the tide turned definitely, wired their subscribing newspapers to withdraw next day's Republican oriented column, adding "We'll take our crow fricaseed".

In Washington's Italian Embassy reposes a valuable antique statue with, at the present moment, no claimers. And thereby hangs another election tale. When Dewey announced he intended to insist on Italy's colonies being returned, a group of wealthy Italians were so immensely gratified they hustled to collect funds, bought the statue. The work of art, worth a great deal and umpty-umph years old, was despatched to Ambassador Tarchiani with the request he present it to Dewey. The Ambassador, tactful, as a good Ambassador should be, demurred, advising presentation could only be made after election. Thus a great many scarlet faces were avoided, but the problem of what to do with the enchanting statue remains unsolved.

Georgetown Art Exhibit

THOSE who love Georgetown may not know about the Peabody Room in the Georgetown Library. It is a room maintained by a fund set up in 1867 by philanthropist George Peabody to house all sorts of Georgetowniana. The collection includes maps, newspapers, scrapbooks, letters, books about Georgetown, phases of life from the early days of the C & O canal to the present. Practically anything printed or drawn about Georgetown is on file. The works of four Georgetown artists are now on exhibition—Alice Acheson and Marcella Comes (Mrs. Randolph Winslow), painters; and Alice Decker, Maxim Elias, sculptors. On November 23, ink and gouache drawings of Georgetown houses by Leon Masson, the well known French artist, will be on view.

U. S. Prefers to Face Issues, Dr. Wright Tells Democrats

If Governor Thomas E. Dewey's advisers had understood American history better, the GOP presidential candidate would have conducted a different type campaign. And if the poll takers had understood this country's early history, they wouldn't be so far out on a limb. So declared Dr. Rice B. Wright, director of the Folger Library, at the Woman's National Democratic Club's first post-election luncheon yesterday in the clubhouse.

The speaker told the audience, largest in two years, that the Colonial history clearly proved that the people of this country preferred to face rather than dodge difficult issues.

Author of a new biography of William Byrd, Dr. Wright said, "Isolationism ought to be impossible for anyone who knows our Colonial history. We are part of the European background and we have never been able to stay out of any serious conflagration. About the only one we didn't get mixed up in was the Crimea War and a few minor skirmishes.

"Too many people think the State owes them everything and that they have no duty to the State or community," explained Dr. Wright. Such aristocrats as William Byrd of Westover, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and other dynamic leaders inherited a tradition of learning and believed that the privileged felt a responsibility to give service to the community and State, despite sacrifices and hardships.

"In Byrd's day the privileged felt their obligation to society to be intelligent and learned," he continued. "The leaders could speak and write Greek, Hebrew and Latin as well as English. Yet, they all led busy lives and worked," and added. "If Congressmen had the same attitude toward learning and intelligence as the earlier leaders, the wouldn't make many of the statements they shout."

Mrs. James L. Houghteling, program chairman, introduced the speaker, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, club president, presided.

About Football Trip Etiquette

I have received an invitation from a boy to attend a football game at an out-of-town school. I plan to journey to and from the school by car with his parents and therefore will spend the night in a nearby hotel. Now I would like to know just what is expected of me in the way of financial matters. That is, am I supposed to pay for my own lodging, etc.? L. M.

If the boy's parents have invited you to go on this trip with them, you will be their guest and it is therefore appropriate for them to pay the expenses. It might be a becoming gesture, however, for you to offer to pay your own hotel bill when checking out time comes. If they refuse your suggestion, do not be embarrassingly insistent about it.

To D. K. B. and C. M., both of whom have asked about softening lumpy granulated and brown sugar: There are several ways. Brown sugar can be softened and kept soft. One is by placing a piece of cut apple into the container with the sugar. White sugar, if it is kept dry and is not lumpy before being stored in a tin container, usually will not become hard. Granulated sugar which is already lumpy before being stored can be freed of lumps by rolling or pounding with a rolling pin.

After the lumps have been broken into egg-sized pieces or smaller they can be put through a food chopper. Do not place an apple or any object with moisture in it in a can of white sugar. Unlike brown sugar, coming in contact with moisture causes white sugar to become hard.

Would you tell me how to make the ruff of a crocheted doily stand up? J. N. Q.

To starch the ruff of the doily stiff enough to get it to stand, do this: Use the proportions given on your starch box for the heaviest starch. Dip the freshly washed and still wet doily into this and dry thoroughly. If, when it is dried, it does not seem stiff enough to stand, dip the dry doily again into the heavy starch. Let it thoroughly dry, then sprinkle and roll tightly into a towel to evenly distribute the moisture. Do most of the ironing from the wrong side and iron until completely dry. When there is much humidity in the air, such articles do not remain stiff for long. However, this season of the year, when there is heat in the house you should have no trouble from this source.

Will you give me the name and address of the company in Chicago from whom I can obtain samples of leather and directions for making gloves? I believe this appeared in your column some time ago, and I believe the name to be something like "Larson's". C. T. A.

J. C. Larson Co., 180 N. Wacker dr. Chicago, 6, Ill.

How can I restore the fluff of pillow feathers which are becoming hard and losing their springiness? Will steaming the feathers, by inserting a teakettle spout in a slit in the pillow cover, accomplish this, or is a better method that of running the feathers through a vacuum cleaner? J. B. R.

The success of either method you suggest is doubtful. Here's why: Steaming the feathers as you suggest would not fluff them because there would be no outlet for the steam and moisture. When this method is used commercially, the feathers are placed in a drum which is arranged so that the steam can pass through the feathers. Because feathers tend to lose their natural oil and become brittle with age, running them through the vacuum would tend to break them more and thus destroy their buoyancy. So, to have these feathers reconditioned, I would suggest you turn the job over to a professional who has the equipment and skill to do the job. To find such a firm, look under "Mattresses" in the yellow section of the telephone book for one that advertises the renovating of pillows.

Where might I obtain a gauge for sizing up beads before restringing? L. M. O.

A bead gauge marked off in millimeters such as is used by jewelers can be ordered for you through a jewelry store. However, the jeweler with whom I discussed your question suggested that unless you were going into the bead stringing business you would not need such complicated equipment. He said that many times jewelers use a simple trough to lay the beads into rather than a gauge. Or, I have seen beads being strung successfully by laying them in the center crease of a large open magazine. Lay the largest beads in the middle and reduce the size as you work to the outer edge on each side. When they are layed in the groove in this way it is easy to pick out any which are not placed right for size and replace them. By counting the beads so you have the same number on either side of the center one, you can be sure the largest beads will be directly in the center.

Always remove wash from the line as soon as it is dry to save unnecessary flapping in the wind.

In response to N. L.'s inquiry concerning the origin of the "trick-or-treat" custom, I first encountered this about 15 years ago, when it was introduced in our community by children in a family which had just moved from Canada. As the "children" were actually of high school age we considered it more or less "highway robbery," but were assured that it was a widespread custom on Halloween in Canada. By the next year, it had been widely adopted throughout our whole community in a Massachusetts city. So perhaps our Canadian or British cousins provide us with a folklore or traditional background for this custom. M. F.

I have never seen baking powder suggested for removing stains from china in your column. I always use this, made into a thin paste, on the finest china, as it does not scratch. M. H. R.

PETUNIA!

It IS a shame to spoil it, Petunia—but at least you can do a good carving job. Wet your knife before you cut into that meringue, and it won't stick or peel off.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Dress-Up Time

When the junior misses move into their teens, it is only natural that they will often want to dress up so as to look much older than they really are. Mothers and fathers, on the other hand, think it much nicer and more appropriate for daughter to "be her age."

One family worked out a rather effective compromise. On Sunday evenings, Sally and her pals were encouraged to put up their hair, borrow dresses from older sisters and friends, practice using lipstick and other cosmetics and in general go on a spree.

Though they would have liked to have strutted around the town, they were willing to walk only in the immediate neighborhood. Of course, the "gang" would have preferred to go the whole way and dress up most of the time, but they realized their parents were good sports and were willing to compromise.

Whether you think this particular procedure would work or not, it's wise to give the young gals a chance to get some of the dressing-up urge into action. Among other things, they are learning how to choose clothing and accessories that will be suitable when they really reach the grown-up-clothes stage.

Mary Haworth's Mail

and His love is perfected in us." And His love includes His power, of course.

Those whose lives are haunted by fear and who submit their feelings to exploitation by witchcraft usually share in some measure the fate of Job, who lamented, "The thing I greatly feared hath come upon me." But the reason is, they are hypnotized victims of their own wrong thinking. It is a law of life—better known today than ever before—that "anticipation is the key to realization."

Believe in God and Fear Nothing

THESE fearful people are lost in darkness, in a sort of panic of soul, like hapless children somehow alienated from a good father's keeping; and your grandmother is such a person, despite her zealous church-going.

The essence of true worship is joyous reverent attunement to the nature of God, in awareness that God is love and His power infinite on behalf of those who invoke it with understanding; and as Jesus presciently illustrated, one who is spiritually anchored in this knowledge has nothing to fear—not even death.

But your grandmother's preoccupation with superstition—mankind's tag-end heritage from pagan ancestors and devil-worship which tyrannically exploited the power of thought—proves that she "believes on" demons rather than God, regardless of her churchly activities.

You write a fine letter, indicative of superior intelligence, and my advice is to close ears and mind to your grandmother's primitive ignorant voodoo blather. If she believes in "curses," she courts bad fortune for herself, but the origin of it is in her unconscious; and your protection is to realize that her false belief isn't binding upon you, if you wisely reject it. For further instruction on this point, study "Power Through Constructive Thinking," an Emmet Fox book published by Harper & Brothers.

Women Voters Inspect Housing

The District of Columbia League of Women Voters began the first in a series of "Go-See" tours yesterday—with an inspection of some of the public housing projects and a tour of the slum areas in the city.

John Ihlder, executive officer of the National Capital Housing Authority, told club members that now is the time to build again for people of low income. In the conference room of the Capital Park and Planning Commission in the Interior Building, members of the group heard Gen. U. S. Grant, 3d, urge continued support by the league in stimulating popular interest in proper planning and in backing the necessary appropriations to carry out the work.

Mrs. Monroe Burke, director of D. C. Affairs for the District League, planned yesterday's "Go-See" tour as well as those slated for November 15, 22 and 29.

Rapid Growth Shown Here in Coin Machines

By S. Oliver Goodman

One of the fastest-growing, but least publicized, businesses in Washington is the automatic merchandising industry.

Goldman

Sales volume last year approximated six million dollars in the Washington metropolitan area, according to an estimate yesterday by Aaron Goldman, regional chairman of the National Automatic Merchandising Association. This was an increase of about 66 per cent over prewar 1940, according to Goldman, who is also president of the G. B. Macke Corp., 212 H st. nw., one of the pioneer robot merchandisers in this city.

Exact figures on the extent of the industry here are unavailable because of the highly competitive nature of the business, but Goldman ventured these area estimates as of this year: 400 "cup-type" beverage machines, 3500 cigarette dispensers, 2500 candy machines, 2500 gum machines 1500 nut machines and 500 cigar machines.

Rapid as the gain has been since the war ended, the increase would have been greater, Goldman declared, had it not been for the critical shortage of materials and the current high costs of making vending machines.

From another local source, it was learned that demand for drink and food vending machines from retail stores, offices, theaters, gasoline stations and other establishments has become "tremendous."

Generally speaking, one local official revealed, the average soft-drink machine here costs about $1000 and must dispense between 150 and 200 drinks a day to break even. The average gross income to machine operators is 1½ cents out of every five-cent drink. The average "cut" to the establishment that houses the machine is 15 to 20 per cent of gross sales, payable monthly. The profits figures for other types of robot salesmen are generally lower.

Nationally, the vending machine industry as a whole now has more than 650 million dollars annual income.

In addition to the Macke Corp., large automatic merchandisers in Washington include: the Canteen Co., 212 H st. ne.; Spacarb of Washington, Inc., 413 13th st. ne.; Washington Coca-Cola Bottling Works, Inc., 400 7th st. nw., and Automatic Fountains, Inc., 6105 Blair rd.

HOLIDAY: Washington banks, building and loan associations and brokerage houses will be closed Thursday in observance of Armistice Day. All security and commodity exchanges likewise will suspend operations.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Alan L. Yakely, former regional supervisor for Bell Aircraft Corp., has been appointed Washington district sales manager of Kaiser-Frazer Sales Corp . . . Henry E. Hund has been elevated to board chairman of Reo Motors Inc. and Joseph S. Sherer, jr. succeeds him as president and general manager . . . Edward C. Baltz, president of Perpetual Building Association, has been named chairman of the payroll savings committee of the District of Columbia Savings Bond Division . . . Howard W. Kacy of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co., has been reappointed vice president of the American Life Convention for the District of Columbia . . . John F. Hardesty of Radio Station WOL will resign December 1 to become associated with Television Station WOIC of Washington.

MD. BANK NOTE: J. Millard Tawes, State bank commissioner, said yesterday he has ordered an increase in reserve requirements of State banks and trust companies in Maryland. Tawes said beginning Novembe 15, all banks under State jurisdiction will be required to maintain reserves of 16 per cent against demand deposits and six per cent against time deposits. This compares with reserves of 15 per cent and three per cent respectively now in effect.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Nov. 8 (AP).—Grains added a bit more to their postelection advance today, and in some cases it was enough to make new seasonal highs.

The market got off to a shaky start. Corn was weak and wheat barely steady, but after about 15 minutes of trading the market's trend was reversed. Thereafter prices moved slipped below the previous close and at the final gong they were still rising.

New seasonal highs were made by July and September wheat, September corn, September oats and May soybeans. December wheat and oats brought the best prices since last July, while December corn was at its peak for the past month.

Wheat closed 1 to 2⅜ higher, corn was 1¼ to 3½ higher; oats were ⅜ to 1¼ higher; rye was 1⅜ to 2 cents higher; soybeans were 6 to 8¾ higher, and lard was 25 to 32 cents a hundred pounds higher.

New York Cotton

New York, Nov. 8 (AP).—Cotton futures closed firm today, despite the surprise increase in the Government's November forecast of the 1948 cotton crop compared with its October estimate. The trade had looked for a lower report. Final prices were 60 cents to 2.30 a bale higher.

In early dealings the market reached gains of 1.85 a bale on aggressive mill buying in the old crop months and commission house demand for new crop positions, believing the next Congress will raise price supports.

After the crop report, the market declined moderately on liquidation and hedging, but made new highs for the day on a resumption of active trade buying and short covering at the close.

Rapid movement on cotton into the Government loan was one influence. About 2,100,000 bales of the 1948 crop are already in the Government loan. Also at least that much is held privately for better prices.

Nearby December delivery closed at 31.44 cents a pound, or 70 points above the average loan level for 15/16 inch middling at Memphis.

The Department of Agriculture estimated the cotton crop as of November 1 at 15,166,000 bales compared with its October report of 15,079,000 and the actual 1947 production of 11,857,000. Ginnings to November 1 were reported at 10,432,934 bales against 8,368,643 in the same period a year ago.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

District Liners Rehash Champ's Victory

With their good friends returned to the White House and both District Committees, our City Stepfathers are solidly entrenched.

Unfortunately, this makes them less dependent than ever on the good will of the people they govern.

POST MORTEMS

I thought the election was over last week, but District Liners haven't finished commenting on it.

Ray H. Everett starts us off today by observing that Stalin may have liquidated many a Czech and Hungarian, but Harry Truman annihilated the polls.

Mrs. Allen H. Gardner of 1515 Dale dr., Silver Spring, Md., points out that there was something missing from the menu of The Washington Post's proposed Crow Dinner—the dessert. She suggests aspirin.

The latest wisec:ack around town has the Republicans telling each other: "It's not the heat he put on us—It's the humility."

On election day I ran a little paragraph to the effect that "everybody will have a chance to vote except criminals, crazy people and residents of the District." I think it drew more comment than any other paragraph I've ever written.

Among others, Dick Moore of 1311 Fairmont st. nw. wisecracks:

"This is the only nut-house in the world that's run by the inmates."

A friend in Ohio writes that his local radio station picked up the item and inserted it with its election returns, to show the home folks how lucky they were to have a vote. And Mrs. Adrienne B. Engle of Mount Vernon ave., Damascus, Md., can sympathize with us better than most of our Free State neighbors.

She moved from California to Maryland shortly before election day. California wouldn't let her vote because she had moved; Maryland wouldn't let her vote because she hadn't been there long enough.

It was a Dewey-Warren vote, too. No wonder the Republicans had such a rough time.

The printers didn't help matters much. Hazel Simmons of Harrisonburg, Va., clips a story about Dewey which said:

"They got out of their car and walked down Madison ave. The crows quickly recognized them."

(Incidentally, A. B. Crammatte of 1103 Trenton pl. s.e. notes that the printers on one of our afternoon contemporaries must have had their minds riveted on the returns from the South. An article by Thurman Arnold appeared in print under the by-line of "Thurmond" Arnold.)

Jonas Clifton of Box 326, Route 4, Alexandria, Va., sighs that if you look closely at the eyes of the Republicans, you'll find that they're still Dewey.

And my election day jingle about "voting for a man who's human" because "to err is Truman" brings this reply in kind:

I'm all with you for Harry T;
It's good to back a pal up.
But after all, may it not be
That now "to err is Gallup"?

Mary Ellen.

DROWNING HIS SORROWS

Have you heard about the political analyst who took his post-election crow in the form of Old Crow?

SLIGHT CHANGE

There's something symbolic about a brief message which appeared on the CBS interoffice teletype last week. It referred to Elmo Roper's program, which was originally titled "The End of an Era." Shortly before air time, the word came through:

"Elmo Roper, Nov. 7.—Kill title The End of an Era insert The Mandate of the People CBS N.Y."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Young male cat, black, intelligent and friendly." (Hobart 4721).

"Four lovely kittens, about 7 weeks old; very playful." (Georgia 6317).

"Two 6-week-old kittens, gray, very pretty." (Chestnut 2788).

CLIFF-HANGER

The office clown says the Eisenhower story is so exciting he's reading the advance installment to find out how the war comes out.

STREET SCENE

It was about an hour before the Truman homecoming parade started last Friday, and three young ladies were engaged in earnest conversation near 17th and I sts. nw.

They were Abigail Sibley of 5711 32d st. nw., Conna Belle Shaw of 3617 Quesada st. nw., and Mary McNeil of 5402 Connecticut ave. nw.—all 11 years old.

An old man wearing dark glasses and selling shoelaces nearby overheard their excited conversation, and made a suggestion.

"Nobody's brought any flowers to throw at the President," he said.

"Golly, no," agreed the girls. "Here's a florist shop—let's go in and get some roses."

The old man lowered his dark glasses, and looked after them, approvingly. But in a moment they were back, emptyhanded.

"They're awfully expensive. The man said $6 a dozen for the good ones. We just brought a little change with us."

The shoelace vendor grunted. "You girls come with me."

They marched back into the florist shop, the old man peeled off $3 for a half-dozen roses, gave two to each of the girls, and smiled.

"Now," he said, "we can greet the President the way Presidents are supposed to be greeted. Go along with you."

THREE JEERS FOR VISHINSKY

When this guy Vishinsky makes with his big chinsky
His face is a deep crimson hue.
His hair is quite white and he spits out his spite
As the air all around him turns blue.

Perhaps it's an omen to some of our foemen
That though they may belier and lie
The Red, White and Blue keeps on shining right through
And Democracy never will die!

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—Jane Greer, the young film star, said yesterday that only one politician has remained consistent in her lifetime. 'That's Herbert Hoover," she said. "He's consistently the only living former President" . . . The bravest man in American journalism this year was the editor of the Prescott (Ariz.) Courier, who used a headline last week "Truman's Election Assured." . . . Dorothy Sarnoff who plays the role of Maria in "Magdalena," got the job of sending two teeth to the producer, with a note "I'd give these eyeteeth to do 'Maria.'"

One of the blacklisted Hollywood Ten was asked about their plans for the future and replied: "If we win our civil suits against the companies, we'll have a combined cash capital of around nine million dollars."

Henry Sherek, coproducer of "Edward, My Son," tells of a London veteran who had been working as a prompter for many years. Sherek asked him how frequently the actors in the shows in which he had worked had lapses of memories and needed to be prompted in their lines. The prompter reported of the night, when he knew he really had a tough job in store . . . This was in a production of "Hamlet," when he had to prompt Hamlet "—or not to be."

Dr. I. Lubin, who was Roosevelt's statistician, and Edward Warburg will leave for Paris soon, as the American delegates to the Joint Distribution Committee's convention of all the contributing countries . . . A noted Broadway producer who lost heavily on the election had offered 30 to 1 odds on Dewey, election eve. Some of his friends took the bets only because the odds were irresistible.

Leonard Bernstein, who is conducting the Israel Symphony, has been writing friends: "You can't imagine such music. You should hear Beethoven's Leonore trumpet solo with an accompaniment or artillery shells."

A visitor in Boston saw Moss Hart's play, "Light Up the Sky," and asked Bernard Hart: "How does your brother, Moss, feel these days?" . . . "I'll give you an idea of how Moss feels before one of his plays opens on Broadway," said Bernard. He told of the weekend Gen. Hap Arnold spent at Moss' home to discuss the Air Force show, "Winged Victory." On Arnold's mind was the European invasion—he knew the date—the invasion of Saipan, and the new B-29 raids over Japan. "And with all those things on his mind," said Bernard, "General Arnold slept better than Moss did."

Merry-Go-Round

Voters' Aim Was Careful And Deadly

By Drew Pearson

Don't underestimate the intelligence of the American voter when it comes to focusing on the Congressmen who worked for the lobbies and the pocketbook rather than for the public. Close scrutiny of the election returns show that the voters used squirrel rifles, not shotguns. They picked their Congressmen carefully, and their aim was deadly.

Pearson

Here is the voters' list of those who never will be missed:

W. J. Miller, Conn.—Introduced two bills taking the heart out of the Federal Power Commission. Brazenly stationed two lawyers from Connecticut Light and Power at his elbow during the hearings. It was obvious they had much to do with writing the bills. Now he's defeated.

Forrest Harness, Ind. — When newsmen exposed Miller's operations for the power lobby, Harness started an investigation of Government propaganda; thunderously accused the Government of lobbying for health, housing and reclamation. He pushed passage of rider refusing appropriation for Reclamation Commissioner Mike Strauss for alleged propaganda, but meanwhile let the real estate and medical lobbies tell him what to do. Now Harness is defeated.

Harold Knutson, Minn.—He let Wall Street tax experts sit on a private committee without public hearings and draw up the new tax bill; refused labor representatives an equal chance to present their case. Minnesota voters got wise and Harold won't be with us any more.

Bud Gearhart, Calif.—At first refused to hold hearings on reciprocal trade treaties. Later held brief, secret hearings and reported out bill emasculating reciprocal trade. The Senate rectified part of his unfairness. Now he's defeated.

Charles Fletcher, Calif.—One of real estate lobby's best friends on Banking and Currency Committee. Voted against rent control, public housing and for the real estate lobby right down the line. Meanwhile, his own savings and loan firm in San Diego has been investigated for a real estate transaction. He won't be with us any more.

Charles Kersten, Wis.—Failed to pay his State income taxes for three years. Made out a false report of his 1946 campaign expenditures in violation of Federal Corrupt Practises Act.

Robert Rockwell, Colo.—A rock in the path of progress. Did more for the power lobby than for the people of Colorado. Though wealthy, was not above using taxpayers' money to pay local political leader to help in his campaign.

John McDowell, Pa.—No. 2 member of the Un-American Activities Committee. Participated in various smears.

Richard Vail, Ill.—Because of his tough reelection fight, other members of the Un-American Activities Committee let him become spokesman so as to give him more publicity. The extra publicity apparently helped defeat him.

Fred Busbey, Ill.—Sometimes called The Chicago Tribune's "busboy," he voted with the big lobbies on almost everything.

John J. Riley, S. C.—A member of the real estate lobby, he voted against public housing. South Carolina voters didn't wait for November, but retired him in the primaries.

Horace Seely-Brown, Connecticut—Only five Congressmen opposed higher education allowances for war vets, but he was one of them.

Howard Buffett, Neb.—A bedrock reactionary who shot off his mouth once too often.

Frank Sundstrom, New Jersey—Another free vote for the big lobbies.

Harold Youngblood, Mich.—A weak-kneed conservative. Voted against rent control though his constituents in Detroit are hard up for rental space.

Max Schwabe, Mo.—Threw all his bulky weight against the Marshall Plan and a decent minimum wage for workers because he said it would gain him votes in his farm district. He was wrong.

Defeated the duPonts

The plain folks of Delaware have selected one of their own number to represent them in the United States Senate. He is a typical smalltown businessman, J. Allen Frear, jr., who sells milk and coal but never before ran for public office.

His victory was a humiliating blow to the duPont family, whose son-in-law, Senator C. Douglass Buck, had upheld big business in the Senate. The Republicans were cocksure of winning, but in the end the duPonts' big man lost to the Democrats' little man, Frear—even though Dewey carried the States.
